CRASH KILLS DRIVER

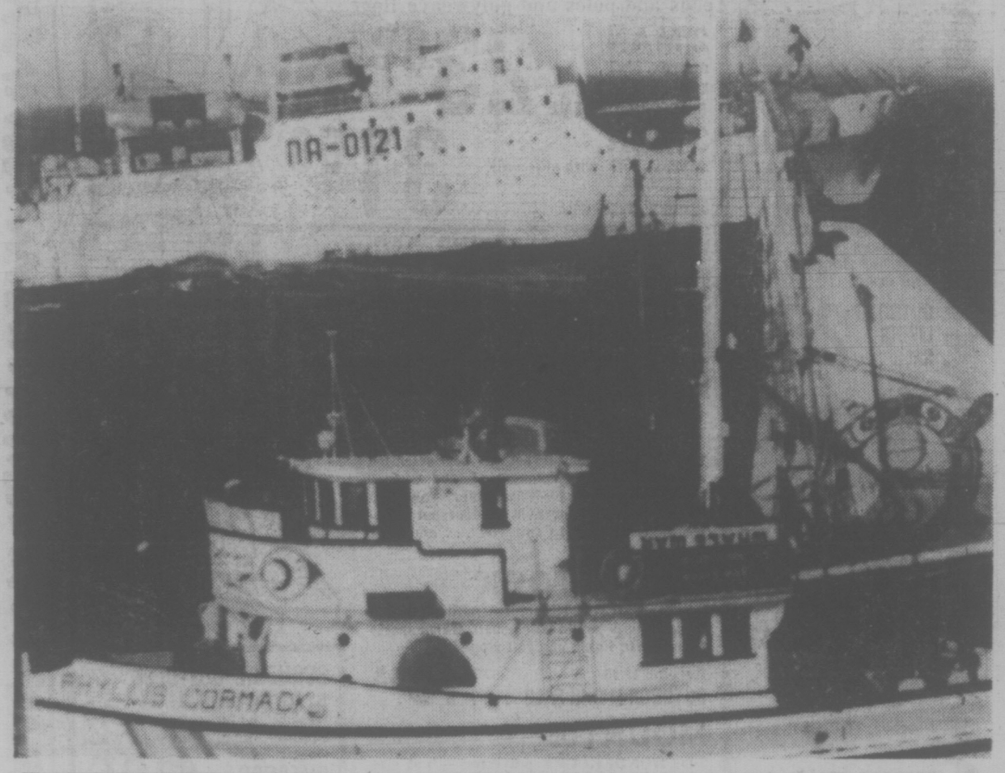
A 23-year-old woman was killed early this morning when the car she was driving hit a power pole on Hillside just east of Grosvenor.

A Victoria police spokesman said Joy Marie Cullen was killed instantly in the crash which happened at 12:22 a.m. only a block away from her residence at 107-1414 Hillside.

The spokesman said Mrs. Cullen, the lone occupant in the car, was on her way to work at a telephone answering service. He said she leaves a three-year-old daughter who was in the care of a babysitter at the time.

It took police and firemen more than half an hour to free the woman's body from the wreckage.

GREENPEACE competitor is the 82-foot Phyllis Cormack which put out to sea Monday from Mendicino, Calif., to harass Soviet whalers in the Pacific. A spokesman for the 10 people aboard the vessel said that if the whalers do not give up their hunt they are prepared to put their bodies between the whales and whalers' harpoons.



Hijackers Will Trade 256 Hostages for 53

Times News Services

KAMPALA — Palestinian hijackers demanded today the release of 53 "freedom fighters" held in Israel, West Germany and three other countries as ransom for 256 hostages and an Air France jet airliner.

French Foreign Minister Jean Sauvagnargues immediately announced that his government would not give in to the demands in the hijacking that began Sunday over Greece.

The hijackers said the prisoners, most of whom have Arab names, must be brought to Uganda's Entebbe airport and the exchange completed before 5 a.m. Victoria time.

The broadcast listed 40 "Palestinians and those fighting for the Palestinian cause" held in Israel. They included Archbishop Hilarion Capudji, the Greek Catholic archbishop of Jerusalem who is serving a prison sentence for smuggling arms to Palestinian Arabs.

Six prisoners were listed in West Germany, five in Kenya, one in Switzerland and one in France.

Those in West Germany have German names.

Sauvagnargues did not indicate whether France was refusing to release the one French prisoner or was rejecting participation in the entire scheme as the airline's home government.

The hijackers did not say what they would do if their demands or deadline were not met.

They threatened Monday to

AIRPORT HEIST NETS $3.4M

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard launched a nationwide hunt today for a British official of a U.S. air courier company suspected of masterminding the theft of at least £2 million ($3.44 million) from a warehouse at Heathrow Airport.

The Yard refused to give any details. But informed sources said the wanted man was a security manager with Purolator Services Ltd., the courier company, who has not been seen since the theft Saturday from the British Airways warehouse.

A reward of £125,000 ($215,000) has been offered for recovery of the money, at least half of which was in U.S. currency.

Control Issue Still Up in Air

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The planes were back in the air today but the controversy over bilingual air communication that grounded them for nine days appeared far from being resolved.

Leaders of the Candian Air Traffic Association (CATCA), the Canadian Air Line Pilots Association (CALPA) and Transport Monister Otto Lang Monday announced that agreement had been reached on a special three-man inquiry to evaluate the safety of an expanded bilingual air communication in Quebec.

Prime Minister Trudeau, advised of the agreements during his flight home from a seven-nation summit meeting in Puerto Rico, termed them a victory for bilingualism in Canada — "as total a victory on paper as was needed."

CALPA president Ken Maley and CATCA president Jim Livingston announced they were satisfied with the inquiry's terms of reference which call for proof "beyond a reasonable doubt" that the program can be implemented safely. They agreed to return to normal air operations.

But hours after the agreement was announced, Jean Luc Patenaude, director of the 330-member Quebec wing of CATCA, announced in a telephone interview from Quebec City that none of the

Doyle Bail Given Back

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada ordered today that $50,000 bail, posted more than two years ago, be returned to millionaire industrialist John C. Doyle.

Doyle, the former Montrealer wanted on fraud charges in Newfoundland, is believed living in Panama.

The bail, $25,000 cash and $25,000 in two securities, was posted in December, 1973, when Doyle was charged in Newfoundland with defrauding Canadian Javelin Ltd. of $540,000.

The charges against Doyle were to have been heard Jan. 30, 1974, but the Crown asked for an adjournment to April 1 because Doyle's co-accused, former Newfoundland public servant Oliver Vardy, could not be found.

Doyle's lawyers consented to the delay, but on the condition that his passport be returned.

April 1, the case was adjourned for four months, again because Vardy still was missing, and Doyle's lawyers objected, saying St. John's Magistrate Clement Scott had no power to delay the case.

TABARLY WINNER IN SOLO RACE

NEWPORT, R.I. (Reuter) — Eric Tabarly of France won the 3,000-mile single-handed trans-Atlantic yacht race today from Plymouth, England, to Newport, a spokeswoman for the race organizers said.

Tabarly, who had maintained radio silence since the race started June 5, arrived suddenly in the 73-foot ketch Pen Duick VI early today, surprising everyone, the spokeswoman said.

His latest victory is yet another in a remarkable string of triumphs for Tabarly and his Pen Duick boats.

He won the 1964 race in his 44-foot ketch Pen Duick II. As a consequence, the late President Charles de Gaulle made him a chavalier of the Legion of Honor.

Four years later, he entered again with a 70-foot trimaran named Pen Duick IV but was forced to withdraw when it proved not to be seaworthy.

His former protege, Alain Colas, radioed Monday morning to say he was moving slowly in insufficient wind about 125 miles from the finish line. He was sailing the largest vessel ever entered in the single-handed race, the 236-foot schooner Club Mediterrance.

Panarctic 'Doctored' Report

CALGARY (CP) — Panarctic Oils Ltd. last year doctored a report from one of its own consultants to downplay the environmental impact of extended seismic testing on Bathurst Island in the High Arctic, according to The Albertan.

The newspaper, in a copyright story today, also said Panarctic pleaded guilty at Yellowknife May 20 to operating in the territories without a land use permit and was fined $2,000.

Since 1971, only five court convictions have been registered under land use regulations although more than 1,400 permits have been issued.

Only Panarctic has been convicted twice, once May 20 and once for violations at a High Arctic well, the newspaper said.

Panarctic is owned 45 per cent by the federal government with the remaining 55 per cent held by a consortium of 30 private companies.

The newspaper said that in the winter of 1975, Panarctic was conducting a seismic program across the southern end of Bathurst Island.

Seismic crews shared the area with about 90 muskoxen and 25 caribou, the remnants of much larger herds decimated the previous winter by harsh weather that limited grazing.

As a result, a land use permit specified Panarctic had to conclude its seismic program by March 15, 1975, to allow the muskoxen to go through their calving period undisturbed.

Quoting sources close to F. F. Slaney Ltd., then Panarctic's environmental consulting firm, the paper said Panarctic altered and made additions to an opinion submitted by Slaney after the Northwest Territories land use office in Yellowknife rebuffed repeated requests for an extension in the testing program of at least 16 days and to add an

Building Shutdown . . . Gov't Sits Out

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

B.C.'s construction industry will be shut down at 4 p.m. Wednesday with the lockout of 40,000 union workers and the provincial government has no plans to intervene.

"We are going to let it happen. There's nothing else we can do at the moment," a high government source said today.

He said the government had failed to find a formula to bring all unions together in a joint bargaining council requested by the Construction Labor Relations Association, which represents the 850 companies in the dispute.

He said both the employers and the 21 unions had been dragging their feet on the question of joint bargaining until it was too late.

"It is very difficult to resolve a difficult question like this (joint bargaining) during the heat of battle."

The outlook is for a long lockout unless the parties to the dispute either reach an agreement or request the services of the Mediation Services Branch.

The government remained hopeful but not optimistic that an agreement could be reached before the deadline of 4 p.m. Wednesday when the lockout would take effect.

The companies are locking out the unions because of the selective strike by about 600 cement masons. The masons put up a picket line which closes any construction project they strike.

Labor Minister Allan Williams today continued to encourage both sides to return to the bargaining table.

Williams agreed with CLRA officials that it would be desirable for the unions to form a joint bargaining council but the question was more complicated than it appeared on the surface.

One problem was a few companies preferred to deal directly with a single union. On the other hand, some unions believed they could do better if they negotiated on their own.

Williams has received a report on the dispute from associate deputy minister Ken Smith but found no grounds for immediate action in the report.

The report stated that neither the companies nor the unions had urged the government to intervene.

The report also said that until there is a request for government help there was little the government could do except to watch events. The only continuing government action is to be available around-the-clock to provide mediation services if requested.

Labor Strife Hurting Recovery–Employers

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Employers Council of British Columbia said in its mid-year economic outlook released Monday that the province's reputation for unreliability because of labor disputes is severely hurting its economic recovery.

The council said B.C. will continue to lag behind the rest of Canada in the coming six months because of high costs, high taxes and a low level of consumer confidence.

The council called for a meeting of leaders from labor, management and government to develop proposals for improving labor relations.

"Until this is done," said the council, "increasing deterioration can be expected."

The outlook said that although recent legislation indicating a change from royalties to a profit tax has been welcomed by the mining industry, it will not immediately produce any investment that had not already been planned.

However, all potential mines which had been shelved are being re-examined and production start-ups might be announced before the end of the year.

The council also said the provincial forest industry is headed for a recovery over last year's labor-disrupted showing.

Tourism is expected to decline by at least 10 per cent, the council predicted, blaming the province's reputation for having "among the highest prices in North America."

. . . FAMILIES PULLING OUT

The provincial department of housing says the province experienced a new loss of 30 families in 1975, compared to a gain of 3,731 in 1974.

The department's annual report, tabled in the House Monday, says the drop is the first in British Columbia since 1958.

The report also says housing starts in B.C. increased by nine per cent with 34,152 starts compared with 31,420 the previous year.

The Vancouver area reported a decline of eight per cent in housing starts, dropping to 13,308 starts from 14,452. Greater Victoria had a 51 per cent increase, to 3,980 from 2,630 starts in 1974.

There was 145-per-cent increase in the number of newly-completed, unoccupied apartments and rowhouses in the Vancouver area in 1975. The number rose to 1,652 compared with 675 units in 1974.

In Greater Victoria there were 199 such units at the end of 1975, one less than the previous year.

Vancouver had 1,158 vacant single-detached houses and duplexes in November, 1975, 441 units less than the previous year.

Greater Victoria had 34 unoccupied new houses compared with 111 such units in November, 1974.

The report says the apartment vacancy rate showed no improvement, remaining at 0.1 per cent in both Vancouver and Greater Victoria.

More Auditors to Check Gov't Welfare Illegalities?

The auditing staff for the department of human resources may soon be doubled to guard against illegal use of funds by people employed in provincial welfare offices, Human resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm, told the legislature Monday.

In response to a question from Conservative leader Scott Wallace, Vander Zalm said there are currently three auditors employed by the department to investigate possible welfare frauds and there are plans to hire another three.

Wallace asked if there is any evidence arising from an alleged misuse of funds in the New Westminster welfare office which would justify a review of all accounting procedures in the offices.

Teams of chartered accountants and New Westminster detectives have been investigating possible employee fraud for more than a month, including checking the records of some caseworkers back to 1973.

Vander Zalm said the investigation is expected to finish in about 10 days but he didn't know if charges would be laid.

The minister said he doesn't know how much money is involved in the New Westminster case.

NEWS BRIEFS

Post Haste

TAIPEI (UPI) — A young Taiwanese man wrote 700 love letters to his girl friend over the past two years proposing marriage. His persistence finally brought results. A newspaper reported Monday the girl was engaged to the postman who faithfully delivered all the letters.

TUCSON (UPI) — The former police chief of the Mexican state of Sonora and the Democratic candidate for sheriff of Pima County have been indicted for allegedly running a marijuana smuggling ring that sent more than five tons of marijuana a month from Mexico to the United States.

Eight More Dead

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — Swedish rescue workers today pulled the bodies of eight more victims from the wreckage of a commuter train pulverized in a head-on collision with a freight train. Recovery of the bodies pushed the death toll from Monday's crash near Helsingborg to 15.

'Hocus-Pocus On BCR'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Railway is playing around "hocus-pocus" with its employees' new settlements and anything could happen as a result, Jack Whittaker, chairman of the joint council of B.C. rail unions, said Monday.

Whittaker said B.C. Rail's announcement that the unions' recently-won pay increases would probably be subject to anti-inflation board approval could mean the end of any good faith between the unions and the railway.

Bilingual Markers Not Wanted

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — City council decided Monday to tell the federal government that it doesn't want bilingual markers on several federal historic sites here.

The federal government notified the city earlier that it will replace three English plaques with bilingual ones as part of a nation-wide program started one year ago.

"It's a real waste of money," said Ald. Bill Cousins. "It really perturbs me. They must have rocks in their heads."

Reading a statement in French, Ald. Cousins said he wasn't opposed to bilingualism, but objected to what he termed the unnecessary expense of changing the plaques.

Libya Threat in Lebanon

Times News Services

BEIRUT (AP) — Libya has threatened to intervene in the Lebanese civil war on the side of the Palestinians and their Lebanese Moslem allies if the Christians overrun two besieged Palestinian camps on the east side of Beirut, a leftist broadcast reported today.

Beirut Radio said Libyan Premier Abdel Salam Jalloud, who has been trying to arrange another ceasefire in the civil war, warned that "Libya will stand on the side of the nationalist movement and the Palestinian revolution" and will have nothing to do with a proposed roundtable peace conference.

Leftist leader Kamal Jumblatt met Arab ambassadors during the night and appealed to several unnamed Arab states — Libya is presumed to be one of them — to send warplanes and paratroopers to break the siege of the two Palestinian camps.

Jalloud called off a peace-seeking meeting with Christian leaders. He said he will not talk to them until they stop the offensive against the Tal Zaatar and Jisr al-Basha camps and agree to a ceasefire.

Jalloud's threat raised the prospect of conflict between the several hundred Libyan troops in Lebanon as part of the proposed pan-Arab peacekeeping force and the thousands of Syrian troops who have invaded Lebanon since June 1 to prevent victory by the Palestinians and Lebanese Moslems.

There was no letup in the battle today in and around Beirut. The fighting still was hardest around the two Palestinian camps which the Christians have been trying to take for more than a week. But fires raged in the Christian-held port area.

Mortar and artillery shells exploded in the Christian and Moslem sectors of the city. Fighting was reported in neighboring mountain areas.

Nearly 200 persons were reported killed Monday, pushing the estimate for 14 months of civil war to nearly 29,000 dead.

The West German government announced it is closing its embassy and advised the 500 West Germans in the country to leave.

The British embassy, planning an overland convoy to Damascus this week and next, also urged its nationals to take "what may be the last chance of leaving."

About 1,300 Americans remain after 236 were evacuated June 20.

The Christian Amchit radio said Christian militiamen captured hilltop positions overlooking the two besieged camps, but Beirut Radio denied this.

Quebec controllers would participate in the study.

However, progress on the matter appeared to have been made during a meeting that lasted about 2½ hours late Monday among Patenaude, representatives of the Quebec Air Workers Association and Lang, a spokesman for the minister said.

The spokesman said the meeting was characterized by a frank, open exchange of views and the mood was one of cautious optimism for all parties concerned.

Roger Demers, president of the Quebec group that represents controllers, pilots and airport ground support workers, indicated that the Quebec controllers might take part in simulation tests if a system could be arranged where they are guaranteed adequate representation on these tests, the department spokesman said. Demers could not be reached for comment.

Demers appeared to be concerned that his members could not have their views sufficiently represented on the tests through CATCA and CALPA, while Lang also expressed concern about the matter.

No further meetings have been scheduled between Lang and the Quebec air workers, who are prepared to wait for the minister's reaction to proposed solutions they presented during the meeting, the spokesman said.

Without the participation of the Quebec controllers, who would be responsible for implementing the proposed program, the validity of the study remained in question.

The special commission, meanwhile, has been charged with evaluating procedures being developed in a special simulation study now being conducted by the transport department.

Using a computer, the simulation is designed to create conditions similar to those that exist at Dorval and Mirabel airports and bilingual controllers are to be used in developing safe communication procedures.

But immediately after the terms of the commission were announced, Maley told a news conference his association had not changed its position that bilingual air communication at major airports was less safe than a unilingual system.

Livingston said the controllers "would find it difficult" to continue to fight against the bilingual program if the commission judged it safe. CATCA members will take a ratification vote on the agreement reached during the weekend. It is to be completed by July 9.

Members of the commission are Mr. Justice Julien Chouinard of Quebec Superior Court, Mr. Justice W. R. Sinclair of the Supreme Court of Alberta and Mr. Justice D. V. Heald of the Federal Court of Canada.

Mr. Justice Heald was named to the commission after both CALPA and CATCA requested during negotiations with Lang that it be expanded.

Safeguard Concern

A defence witness in the indecency trial of a 30-year-old Royal Jubilee Hospital technician said in court today she was concerned about the lack of safeguards in a hospital testing lab.

Carol Coleman, electroencephalograph technician, was testifying on behalf of Kenneth Roy Black, 2264 Marlene, also an EEG technician who is charged with indecent assault on a 15-year-old girl patient last Sept. 3 and 4.

The witness said she had discussed the matter more than 10 times with other members of the diagnostic services department.

She was concerned, she said, that the charges would reflect on professionalism in the lab and thought there should be more safeguards and security.

"This shouldn't happen. It's shocking," Coleman said. She suggested an intercommunications system betwen labs might be helpful. (See earlier story on Page 28.)

Pair Charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Margaret Noyes, 31, and Charles Elkan, 29, appeared in provincial court Monday charged with trafficking in cocaine and were remanded one week. The charges were the result of a police raid on the charter vessel S. S. Beaver in Vancouver Harbor Sunday.

additional 43 square miles to the testing program.

On March 12, the day after the government's final refusal, Panarctic environmental manager Brian Burrows sent a message attempting to calm government fears about the condition of muskoxen and caribou on Bathurst Island.

The Albertan said the message was based on material prepared in Slaney's Vancouver office that morning at Panarctic's request and forwarded immediately to Calgary.

The Albertan quotes its sources as saying the message received at Yellowknife differed substantially from the original, and neglected to mention that the consultants' original submission had been amended by Calgary.

Hijacker Demands

A pregnant British woman who was released when the plane stopped for fuel in Libya Sunday reported that there were five hijackers — three Arabs, a woman with a German accent and a man who spoke Spanish — among the 257 persons aboard when the plane was seized just after it took off from Athens. She said they were armed with guns and grenades.

The woman, Patricia Hyman, told a correspondent from the Israeli newspaper Maariv that the leader of the quintet was a thin, elegantly dressed man with European features and a Spanish accent.

Rumors were already circulating in Europe that the leader was the legendary 26-year-old South American terrorist Illych Ramirez Sanchez, who is better known under the alias of Carlos.

The 256 persons reported aboard when the plane arrived in Kampala early Monday morning included five Canadians and about 80 Israelis, but Air France withheld the names of all passengers at the request of the Israeli government.

However, the names of the Canadians were released in Ottawa.

They are Pearla Britton, 49, Rev. Jacques-Andre Choquette, 51, Miriam Field, 24, Louise Kourtis, 20, and Joanna Rethmetkis, 18, all of Montreal.

Duncan Route Pushed for Ferry

DUNCAN — Mayor Ken Paskin said Monday he will push to have the Mill Bay ferry relocated north so that it connects Duncan to the B.C. Ferries Swartz Bay terminal.

Use of the Mill Bay ferry has declined since the recent fare increases, and the mayor said he will ask Duncan council to approve a resolution for Transport Minister Jack Davis urging the northern move.

He suggested Cowichan Bay would be a likely spot.

"Four years ago as president of the Duncan-Cowichan Chamber of Commerce, I pushed for a more northern point, and I still feel the same way today, he said.

Paskin said it was easy to understand why traffic on the ferry was decreasing. "People from the more urbanized areas like Duncan drive a good portion of the way to Victoria before they get to the Mill Bay terminal.

"Now with the increase in rates, the people who use the ferry say, 'I have driven this far, I might as well drive the rest of the way," he said.

Current chamber president John McCulloch said the chamber would also likely study the idea.

A B.C. Ferries source said last week that relocation of the Brentwood-Mill Bay crossing would make a lot of sense.

The majority of passengers other than tourists using the Mill Bay ferry, he said, were up-Island residents headed for Swartz Bay.

"They use the Mill Bay ferry as a connector to the Mainland," he said.

It appears, however, that the recent doubling of fares has all but eliminated use of the Mill Bay ferry.

Motorists are driving the additional miles to get up-Island from the Saanich Peninsula via the Malahat, or vice-versa.

By introducing a ferry run connecting Duncan with Swartz Bay, motorists wouldn't have to drive 20 miles south first and then 20 miles north again to get to Swartz Bay, the B.C. Ferries source said.

RANGE BOSS APPOINTED

Jim Milroy of Williams Lake has been appointed the province's first range manager for the B.C. forest service, Forests Minister Tom Waterland announced Monday.

He will be responsible for the management of about 10 million acres of crown rangeland.

Water Checks On Tap

A new water quality check program was jointly announced Monday by Environment Minister James Nielsen and Health Minister Robert McClelland.

Residents of the province can now check their private water supplies by writing to the Environmental Laboratory, Water Resources Service, Department of the Environment, in Vancouver, and enclosing $5.

In return they will receive a sampling kit made up of three bottles, a sheet of instructions, and a shipping container. Results of the test will be mailed back three weeks after the samples are returned to the laboratory.

Nielsen said the service will be of benefit to residents in remote areas of the province or persons wishing to test water supplies at vacation residences.

King Warns Of 'Strife'

NDP labor critic Bill King warned in the Legislature Monday the government's proposed changes to the labor code would create unprecedented economic and industrial relations strife in the province.

Speaking in debate on second reading of Bill 77, King said a proposal to extend the cooling-off period in labor disputes from 22 to 40 days was like "waving a red flag in the face of labor."

King said the government's intention to ban strikes in whatever services it deems essential was "unequitable, punitive, and vesting too much power in the hands of the labor minister."

He suggested if that basic freedom of labor was constricted so should be the freedom to move capital.

In his 50-minute speech King referred to industrial relations in the province as a jungle.

Instead of creating a philosophy to move away from the jungle, he said, the government is inviting a retreat further into it.

He said labor was being used as a "scapegoat . . . an object of popular discrimination," and accused the government of "Archie Bunkerism."

King said the government was exploiting and feeding on prejudice for political expediency alone.

He noted that a searching study of B.C. labor carried out by the Co-ordinated Law Enforcement Unit (CLEU) failed to produce "one tangible evidence that there has been abuse."

The CLEU investigators had concluded labor was "whistle-clean," he declared.

And yet, he said, "the minister passes a law calling for supervised strike votes citing vague, unidentified rumors."

"It is a dangerous precedent . . . for government to intercede in the regular affairs of a private organization," he said. "There is no evidence and no justification for it."

He defied Labor Minister Allan Williams to find "one notable labor expert" who would support such intervention.

Greed was the underlying cause of the industrial relations chaos in B.C., he said.

"We have tough, determined trade unionists who have been taught over the decades that greed is the operative principle of this society. To each his own and the devil take the hindmost."

House Adjournment Hint For Wednesday

The legislature extended its sitting Monday night as 12 bills received final reading, paving the way for a probable session adjournment on Wednesday.

All of the afternoon sitting and the early part of the night sitting were taken up with second reading debate of a contentious bill to amend the Labor Code.

The bill was given approval in principle by a vote of 32 to 13 with all New Democratic Party MLAs voting against.

Then it became apparent that some arrangement had been made to end the spring session before the holiday Thursday as the members stayed until 11:55 p.m. giving third readings to several bills. The night sitting normally adjourns at 11 p.m.

Among the bills which provoked the most debate was one to allow the government to spend $12 million on a grant program for under 25 drivers.

Transport Minister Jack Davis said the program would provide for a 25 per cent refund on insurance premiums for drivers in that age group who have less than six demerit points and no claims this year against the Insurance Corp. of B.C.

Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) said the bill "was atrocious legislation" because it would allow some bureaucrat working for ICBC to decide whether a driver was blameworthy.

"This bill provides a break for those with ICBC policies providing they don't use the policy," said Macdonald, who was the only one to vote against the bill on final reading.

The NDP member also opposed another bill which he said would return the principal of plural voting to B.C.

The Municipal Amendment Act would allow people who own property to vote in the municipality where the property is located although they live outside that municipality.

"We do not vote by property, we vote as individuals," Macdonald said. "It is a retreat from the democratic principle."

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis accepted an amendment from Liberal leader Gordon Gibson which would require a property-owner to have lived in Canada for 12 months and in B.C. for six months immediately preceding the date of his application for registration as an elector.

The main amendment passed by a vote of 30 to 13 with Gibson and Conservative leader Scott Wallace voting with the government and the NDP opposed.

Final reading was also given to bills which would increase the penalties for violations of the Pollution Control Act and Land Act and another which would allow the establishment of a special authority to finance capital projects for the three public universities, the B.C. Institute of Technology and other designated educational institutions.

Trustees Responsible For Any Pay Protests

Wage increases for British Columbia teachers may be referred to the federal Anti-Inflation Board by local school boards, not the provincial department of education, Education Minister Pat McGeer told the legislature Monday.

Under an anti-inflation agreement between B.C. and the federal government, signed last Tuesday, the federal government was given control over all wage increases in the public sector.

The agreement is retroactive, giving the board the power to roll back wage increases which became effective after Oct. 14, 1975.

Teachers in B.C. received an average increase of 12.5 per cent in a one-year contract which became effective Jan. 1.

McGeer said school boards have the right to refer the settlements to the board and added that the department of education will not refer any salary increases to the board.

School Arson Probe Pledged by McGeer

Education Minister Pat McGeer said in the legislature Monday he will meet school board trustees over the summer months to discuss the problems of arson in schools in the province.

McGeer made his comment after Tory leader Scott Wallace asked whether the government intended to place resident caretakers in schools to cut down the incidence of fires.

McGeer said he was not considering such a proposal, nor was he planning to take extra security precautions during July and August when the schools are vacant.

Wallace noted that in a six-day period earlier this month fires in three schools in Surrey, Brentwood Bay and Armstrong caused $1.1 million damage. In each case, he said, arson was suspected if not proven.

Barrett Not In Order

The Legislature erupted into shouts and cries of "Order" Monday as Opposition leader Dave Barrett made a bid to hold an emergency debate on the economy.

The brouhaha was short-lived, however, as Speaker Ed Smith quashed Barrett's motion, ruling it out of order.

Barrett sought the debate focusing on information he said he had which would show the Insurance Corporation of B.C. has a multi-million dollar surplus.

The urged the government to refund the surplus as a means of helping the troubled economy.

Barrett told the house he had talked with several businessmen including "Chunky" Woodward, head of Woodward's Stores, who said the retail business was flat and blamed it on the dramatic increase in auto premiums coupled with the two per cent jump in sales tax and high unemployment.

Barrett said the problem warranted "direct government intervention."

Smith, after receiving whispered advice from the clerk of the house, pondered the motion for several minutes and then declared it failed to qualify as a "matter or urgent public importance."

He said a motion for an emergency debate had to be raised at the earliest possible opportunity and noted the suggestion of a large ICBC surplus had first been raised last Thursday. The debate should have been called then or Friday, he said.

Barrett angrily retorted he was presenting new information that wasn't hypothetical.

Smith said he had made his ruling and couldn't be challenged to which Barrett snapped back he was not challenging the ruling but rather Smith's assertion the ruling could not be challenged.

Education Minister Pat McGeer, minister responsible for ICBC, leapt to his feet and shaking a finger at Barrett snarled Barrett was arguing from a "completely faulty premise."

McGeer's accusation touched off mindless shouts from both sides of the house.

Hemlines of Our Intolerance

Canadians should utter a long sigh of relief that the nine day air strike has ended. The fact that the planes are flying again is ancillary to the real issue. The government has effected a negotiated settlement to a dispute that threatened to turn this generally moderate country into two snarling racist camps. In practically any dispute that severely inconveniences people, wrath is turned towards the strikers. Yet in this strike over bilingualism, pilots were praised, and government damned in English-speaking Canada. Why? Because the majority of English-speaking Canadians are against bilingualism. The hemline of our intolerance was plainly visible last week.

In the wake of this potentially political strike, the interesting question is why the pilots changed their mind over the long weekend of negotiations? In essence the final settlement agreed upon contains similar assurances to those promised pilots all along. New points of agreement include the appointment of a third member to the commission of inquiry into safety aspects of bilingualism in Quebec air traffic control. Another requirement says that the commission must be unanimous in its findings which will be put before parliament in the form of a free vote. Despite new details, it would appear Ottawa was able to convince the strikers that prolonging this strike would tear the national fabric.

Elaborate safeguards negotiated by the pilots are right and proper considering the lives at stake in any commercial airline mishap. But the pilots, having negotiated this airtight agreement on bilingualism, have a few responsibilities too. It is not enough for their representatives to say they do not necessarily have to abide by the commission findings. That implies if the commission finds that bilingual air control is safe pilots and controllers can sit on their hands again. If the commission favors bilingualism in Quebec airspace the pilots must abide by the ruling, the same as the government has promised to do if the decision goes the other way.

The Trudeau administration has defused a potentially divisive issue that went far beyond a simple labor dispute. It deserves credit for not backing down in the face of what amounted to coercion by pilots and air controllers in a carefully orchestrated protest. If the government deserves criticism, it is for not recognizing the potential seriousness of this issue in a country so divided on language use. Transport Minister Otto Lang bent over backwards to meet pilot's objections. Whether or not one section of Canada will be bilingual in the air rests ultimately with parliament. The Trudeau administration has handled this delicate issue in a fair, responsible manner. Would that the majority of the English-speaking public have acted in a similar spirit when this issue first surfaced.

Well Done

Press and public have not been reluctant to attack Prime Minister Trudeau and his government in recent years for a variety of faults, usually lumped together under the shorthand label, failure to provide leadership. According to the Liberals it was what the 1974 election was all about.

But immediately after, the Trudeau administration dithered and dribbled away its strong mandate, leaving the country to fume about its grave economic crisis. Not until it was prodded into action by the crisis precipitated by the resignation of John Turner did the Trudeau government act.

Collectively, we castigated Trudeau for failing to act, failing to come even halfway up to the expectations he raised during the election.

Now, midway through his second term as prime minister, we must give praise where it is due — for the leadership he has shown the country in two recent crises, the cliffhanger debate in the House of Commons on capital punishment and the nine-day strike that shut down most airports over bilingual air traffic control.

It is not charisma, or intelligence, or an ability to communicate, or the quality of inspiring others to action. Leadership is an indefinable, uneasy amalgam of all of these attributes and others. Trudeau put all of them to work in the speeches he delivered a week apart on the two different issues of the noose and bilingualism.

The first he gave in the House of Commons, an eloquent, carefully reasoned but emotional appeal in favor of abolition of the death penalty. He stated plainly what every other speaker skirted — that other living, breathing individuals would die if the bill was defeated by retentionists.

The second speech was made to all Canadians on television in an attempt to answer sanely and rationally the sudden outburst of ugly anti-French prejudice crystallized by the protests of the air traffic controllers and airline pilots.

His message was that we have a country which for a decade has pledged to provide by federal statute equal rights to the founding French-language group which makes up 30 per cent of Canada's population, and French air traffic control in French-language Quebec for francophone pilots — only if it can be done safely, upon the recommendations of experts — is part of those rights.

They were fine, fine speeches, examples of leadership Canadians haven't seen exercised in years. Well done.

W. A. WILSON

A Long and Slow Recovery

OTTAWA — All of the latest signs show that the Canadian economy, recovering slowly and unevenly from the recession, is still beset by worrisome problems that leave real health as much as two or three years away.

This is so despite the encouraging nature of two important economic signs — the five per cent growth in the last 12 months and the slowing of inflation from its destructive rates of a year or so ago. The significant signals of the slowness of recovery are the weakness of consumer demand, the poor level of capital investment, the high level of unemployment, the magnitude of the adverse international balance of payments and the extent to which recent growth has depended upon inventory buildups.

In addition to this, the value of the dollar is reaching the level at which historically Canadian exporters have found it an obstacle to export expansion. There has been a huge influx of foreign funds to Canada this year, most of it in the form of long-term Canadian borrowings. Foreign direct investment in this country, however, has dropped below the level of Canadian investment abroad.

Jobless No Priority

The slowness of the recovery is so widely accepted in Ottawa that action to reduce the level of unemployment has no priority at all—the present rate of joblessness is merely regarded as inevitable given the determination to avoid any policy option that might stimulate a fresh outbreak of inflation. By now it is so taken for granted that it is no longer regarded as objectionable.

Action to stimulate consumer demand is viewed askance, as the recent budget showed, because of fears that it might cause an upsurge in prices. That is the conventional wisdom but there is an alternate view — that there is so much slack in the economy that mild demand stimulation would not be inflation-causing.

The official policy aim, of course, is to secure a slow and reasonably steady recovery from the economic turbulence of the last three or four years in the hope that if nothing is rushed the ultimate recovery of health may be long-lasting.

Because Canada has traditionally run an adverse payments balance, covering the deficit by imports of capital, this is a subject that causes much less alarm in Ottawa than it would in many other capitals. Nonetheless, our deficit has been running at record levels this year — $1.4 billion in the first three months of this year, an $88 million increase from the previous record deficit.

Exports rose by five per cent but imports jumped by eight — and the present value of the Canadian dollar has the effect of making this country's exports still more expensive and harder to sell abroad while it reduces the cost of imports.

Extreme interest rates, which largely account for the current value of the dollar, are regarded as an essential part of the monetary restraint which is one of the key elements in the effort to curb inflation. The net inflow of capital during the first three months of the year was $2.44 billion, enough to offset the adverse payments balance but also an effective mask to an underlying problem of considerable gravity.

Most economic growth this year has come from restocking of inventories — capital investment and personal spending on goods were both down. Total personal spending increased by half of one per cent during the entire first three months of the year.

GERALD BOUEY
... Bank of Canada governor

This economic picture is far more uneven than policy-makers here would like to see but the general trend — slow, gradual recovery — is what they want to see. The governor of the Bank of Canada, Gerald Bouey, has just warned Canadians again of the patience that will be demanded of them. He believes inflation can be brought down at the rate of about two percentage points a year — to around six per cent in 1977 and perhpas to four per cent by 1978.

"It is in fact about the minimum that we can and must achieve if our economy is to become healthy and prosperous again on any lasting basis. . . . A program that attempts to gear down inflation over a three-year period is bound to require a great deal of patience on the part of everyone. . . . We are on the right course and we must stick to it with all the patience and determination we can muster until we have achieved what we set out to do."

Another portion of Bouey's latest speech, delivered in Fredericton last week, perhaps gives a clearer impression of the sort of patience that the public is expected to show. It involves a discussion of interest rates, now (as everyone knows) extremely high. The target for future expansion of money supply will gradually be lowered, the governor said, although this does not involve a change in monetary policy but rather an adaptation to lowering rates of inflation.

"I particularly want to question the tendency of some people to assume that progressively lower rates of monetary expansion must necessarily involve progressively higher rates of interest. . . . To the extent that the rate of inflation in Canada falls, the money value of national income will rise less rapidly and so will the amount of money required to carry on business.

Inflation Premium

"It is therefore within the realm of possibility that receding inflation will permit a gradual moderation of money supply growth without the need for significantly higher interest rates than we have at present. Indeed, in an atmosphere of growing confidence that inflation was being brought under control and would be kept under control, interest rates could over time be expected to begin declining, especially long-term rates which now clearly include a sizable inflation premium."

That passage from the governor's speech is worthy of thought because it reflects as clearly as anything we have had from the government or the bank the new and extremely gradualist approach to economic management when exceptional public patience — or government authority — will be one of the mainstays of economic policy.

How far the governor is dealing with an ideal that can at best be attained only partially is another matter. The next election would not normally take place for at least two years and that provides time for the gradual approach and cautious attitudes which treat 7.5 per cent unemployment as not now a priority problem. Nearer to an election, new pressures will apply.

Chamber Replies

In view of recent statements made in the Victoria and Langford press and over the air, which were incorrect as to the role played by the Sooke-Jordan River Chamber of Commerce regarding the referendum on incorporation for the district of Sooke, I wish to present the following facts:

Early in 1975 the chamber felt that it wished to gain some knowledge about incorporation and to that end invited Mr. Thomas Moore of the department of municipal affairs to address their general meeting of April 9, 1975.

Subsequently our chamber decided to make an in-depth study of the whole question of incorporation for Sooke, and Eric Butler was appointed to do this, and to report his findings to the chamber.

At the chamber's meeting of September 10, 1975, Mr. Butler presented a questionnaire on incorporation and proposed that this be sent to every household in our area to gain the feeling of the residents toward incorporation. While approval was given for this plan, the meeting decided that before any questionnaire was mailed out, the people should be well informed as to the advantages and disadvantages of incorporation, and Mr. Butler agreed to work on this.

On April 14, 1976, Mr. Butler presented at the chamber's general meeting a detailed report on incorporation (which was well published in Sooke Mirror) and he was asked to form a citizen's committee to continue with the study. As a result Len Jones of the Sooke Community Association, Jean Robinson of Kemp Lake Waterworks District, John Farmer of the Lions Club and of the Advisory Planning Committee, James Dunn of the Sooke Athletic Association joined the committee with Mr. Butler, and John Tregear, Ray Nestman and Bede Stenner from the chamber. From then on, our chamber played no further role and at no time was a vote taken on the question of whether or not this chamber favored incorporation.

At our general meeting of June 9, it was felt that the referendum date of June 22 was premature. A motion was made, seconded and passed that this chamber write to Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis, requesting that the referendum vote be postponed to September, and such a letter was mailed on June 10.

In closing, I do wish to commend all the members of the Citizen's Committee, and Mr. Butler in particular, for their hard and dedicated work for a cause in which they believed.—John W. Page, President, Sooke Chamber of Commerce.

Island Info

Vancouver Island Publicity Bureau has always extended to the Victoria Information Centre the courtesy of making its manager a member of the VIPB board of directors and his advice and opinions are sought. Unfortunately the Victoria Information Centre has not seen fit to reciprocate or acknowledge this courtesy even though its manager attends VIPB board meetings. Nor has VIPB ever been consulted or invited to join discussions concerning our common purpose of bringing tourists here and looking after them. On the contrary, one or more Victoria aldermen directly concerned with VIC and promoting their own tourist industry interests, according to press reports and for reasons unknown seem intent on being rudely vociferous and vindictively inclined towards the rest of Vancouver Island through the VIPB, with a dog-in-manger attitude in my opinion of "we are not interested in advertising Vancouver Island externally ourselves but we are going to do everything possible we can to prevent VIPB from doing its job in this regard also."—Les Hammer, President, Vancouver Island Publicity Bureau and Chairma, Provincial Tourist Advisory Council.

Unspoiled Land

Through your newspaper a few weeks ago, the people of greater Victoria area were told that they might lose 153 acres of much needed park land at Beaver and Elk Lakes to a golf course. Most will agree that the southern tip of this island is blessed with many fine golf courses, some private, many public. Yes, we know the region could support another golf course, but not at the expense of lovely Beaver Lake park, covered by open meadows, clusters of large fir trees and criss-crossed by many foot trails.

This park is used by a lot of people in many different ways, a golf course would turn it into a single purpose use with admission charged.

A Vancouver golf architect tries to convince us that, for a nominal fee, he would turn this park into another green belt for the community. What silly statement is that? It's a beautiful green belt now, but won't be after you are through with a club house, pro shop, parking for 200 cars, paved roads, miniature train, tennis courts and possibly a marina on the lake complete with gas pumps.

I am sure that the citizens of this region won't have anything to do with such a stupid plan and should force the Capital Regional Board to dedicate this lovely piece of untouched and unspoiled land to a park in perpetuity.—Walter Lissetz, 501 Richmond Avenue.

Triple Taxes?

Since moving to my home on Falkland Road four years ago my taxes have tripled. I realize wages and inflation are the main cause.

What I am objecting to quite strenuously is the way in which my tax money is being spent.

The proposed sea wall is ridiculous and unnecessary. As a dog walker on Shoal Bay for eight years I have yet to see anyone walking or sunning on that unfortunate little concrete strip already there. It is always covered with sand, stones and logs. There is no erosion where the bank is covered with shrubs and wild flowers Even the enormous logs do not wash away in fierce winter storms.

Those on council who have seen the proposed site for the sorely-needed pump station can only be horrified. Do have a second look and envision the ugliness on that particular point.

Do we really need to spend half a million dollars for covered tennis courts at this time of so-called "restraint?" I think not.

Do the ratepayers in Oak Bay realize what casual summer labor is paid?

I understand it will be $6.24 an hour starting July 1. Fifty dollars a day for cutting grass! With wages like that why does Oak Bay look so seedy and unkempt this year? Could it be that the men often start to pack up at 3:45 for 4:30 closing?

As a taxpayer, therefore an employer, I have every right to complain to them, to the boss on hand and the Oak Bay council when I see it happening.

I am weary of being one of the silent majority — unless we all speak up our taxes will be tripled again by 1980. — Patricia M. Lansdowne, 933 Falkland Road.

Capital Punishment

Having surely heard or read the opinion of nearly every other Canadian on capital punishment, perhaps this subscriber (1921-1976) may be permitted to express an opinion on a closely related subject, the prevention of crime, or more properly its reduction. My remarks are directed particularly to those opposed to the noose.

It is now probably accepted that violent crime has increased with permissiveness and lack of personal discipline. I recall the words of a well-known figure in the Boy Scout movement, George Bristow, about 30 years ago, that up to that time no case of juvenile delinquency had occurred in the ranks of Boy Scouts!

Here, sir, surely is a great challenge to younger generations, to try to restore respect for law and order in Canada. Although involved in many projects, could I help organize another movement along these lines I should try to find the time to do so, and the energy!

My second suggestion is that a departure from the Christian way of life is resulting in a total disregard for responsibility to society. — Garnet Gibson, 3435 Cadboro Bay Road.

Airline English

If, as I have been informed, airline pilots the world over can request and receive English from air traffic controllers, why does little old Quebec have to be different? — R.P., Victoria.

God as Mother: History is on Her Side

By JILL TWEEDIE
Manchester Guardian

Recently I read a snippet about women in the United States who were altering prayers and hymns by substituting Her for Him, Mother for Father and Goddess for God. Oh ho ho, did you ever, sniggered the writer. Put them in strait-jackets and take them off to the funny farm.

One of the continuing small surprises for the enquiring atheist is the widespread ignorance of believers about their belief. A viewpoint peculiarly limited — parochial is, I suppose, the mot juste. Is it wildly unfair to say that if you picked the first avowed Christian off any pew and set him the religious equivalent of the 11-plus, he would fail?

The one I picked was quite hot on the Church version of Jesus's life: who he was born to, where he was born, how he died and where he died, though in between was a bit of a blank, apart from a vague image of white robes, long hair, sheep and children. He knew about Judas and he listed three miracles, including the resurrection but he didn't know the number of apostles and only remembered five of their names.

As to any historical realities of the time, nothing. The Sadducees, the Philistines, the Pharisees and the Samaritans were simply emotive words, the Old Testament an almost complete blank other than the bit about Moses in the cradle and parting the Red Sea. Nor had he any idea at all about the beliefs of the Jews (expect that they killed Jesus, of course), the Buddhists, Islam, Taoism, Shintoism, Hinduism or any other ism. Religions that preceded Christinity? The Greeks had a lot of different gods and the Indians (Red) had the totem pole.

Jig-saw Falls Together

That reporter from the States automatically assumed that his readers would join him in his titters at the absurdity of women who, not content with equal rights, are now pretending God could be female. He has, like most of us, the comforting idea that history started yesterday and will stay that way for ever. Because God and God's son are male today, so they always were and always will be, amen.

Brother, you couldn't be wronger. Slowly but surely a vast and ancient international jig-saw is being pieced together, antic temples here, swollen statues there, papyri drawings, carvings and writings from all over. And already the puzzle, half-finished though it is, is as exciting and significant as would be the revelation of a mother to a child who supposed itself an orphan from birth. Because it appears increasingly certain that a male God is an arriviste, a mere nouveau riche upon the contemporary scene. Before Him for literally thousands of years, disappearing back, back into the trackless wastes of pre-history, the people of the world shared one central figure of worship. A She, a Her. A Mother. The Goddess.

Merlin Stone, sculptor and art historian, has spent over 10 years on the trail of the Goddess and the results of her detective work in museums and ancient sites in the Near and Middle East have just been published in a book called The Paradise Papers (Virago Press). It makes a beautiful whole of many scattered clues until now undiscovered, ignored, misinterpreted, or — shamefully often — unacknowledged; an anthology of archaeological material that fairly bellows Ms Stone's central thesis. The impulse to worship came from the mystery of birth and the performer of that mystery, apparently entirely on her own, was woman.

Millions of Statues

So the explanation of a Goddess, the original Mother of humanity, came about as naturally and, when you think about it, as obviously as all the other apparent miracles of life and the Goddess was made manifest in the millions of statues, large and small, of big-bellied women. Statues we all know about and we have all been encouraged to dismiss as unimportant, mere fertility symbols, evidence only of "cults" of strange rites practised in corners by heretics instead of what they surely are — endless variations of the same central belief held by many peoples over anything up to 25,000 years.

Ms Stone opines that the core of all theological thought is the quest for the ultimate source of life and ancestory worship occurs (and occurred) among tribal people the world over. Add that fact to the observations of anthropologists like Margaret Mead and James Frazer — that in the most ancient human societies coitus was not linked with reproduction — and you have woman the life-giver, the sex that gives birth.

What, then, more logical than to posit a First Ancestress in the Sky? Robertson Smith, writing of the precedence of the female deity among the Arab and Hebrew peoples says: "It was the mother's, not the father's, blood which formed the original bond of kinship among the Semites as among other early people and in the stage of society, if the tribal deity was throught of as the parent of the stock, a goddess, not a god, would necessarily have been the object of worship."

How did women fare when the Goddess reigned in their lands? Merlin Stone brings together the researches of many archaeologists and anthropologists to find out and the answer is as predictable as it is revealing of the purpose of religion. If you have a God in heaven, men rule on earth. If you have a Goddess, women take charge. Diodorus of Sicily, observant traveller BC, reported that the ladies of Ethiopia carried arms, practised communal marriage and raised their children communally.

Of the warrior women in Libya he says: "All authority was vested in the woman, who discharged every kind of public duty. The men looked after domestic affairs and did as they were told by their wives."

Professor Cyrus Gordon, writing of life in ancient Egypt, says: "In family life women had a peculiarly important position for inheritance passed through the mother ... this system may well hark back to prehistoric times when only the obvious relationship between mother and child was recognized." The message is clear and as apposite today as ever. Though you gain power through error (the misunderstanding about the father's part in reproduction), once the system is working for you (matrilineal descent) you can hang on for a very long time in the face of the most damning facts. Patriarchal gods know all about this, too.

Tempting Compensations

Mind you, in spite of probable male suppression under a goddess, there is a plethora of evidence that the goddess made it well worth their while and that under her sexually permissive reign there were more tempting compensations for being a mere man than there ever were for a mere woman in a god's world. Subjugation, says the God, is your punishment. Subjugation, said the Goddess, can be fun. Because one thing is certain. It took eons of bloody struggle to put the Goddess down.

They came out of the northern countries, those eventual victors, migrating in waves over perhaps a thousand, even three thousand years, to the lands of the Goddess, armed with their God and the realization that power for men could only come when a man knew his own son. And how could a man know his own son? By caging women, by making her male property, by scaring her into believing that all hell would break loose if she did, that only by cleaving to one man from virginity to death could she hope to save her soul by a male God's intervention.

So battle commenced, fought as much against the desires of many men as against the sexual freedom of women. All over the territories of the Goddess are the myths that mark the traces of that battle. For years I have wondered at the stories of men fighting dragons — what did a dragon represent, what was its factual origin? Merlin Stone drops in another piece of the puzzle. The snake (serpent, dragon) was the widespread Goddess symbol and the living companion of her priestesses. So what was St. George doing, fighting his dragon? He was the new religion fighting the old, the male squaring off with the female, an historical reality told in snake/man struggles in hundreds of nations and tribes from India to Turkey, from Babylon to Assyria, from Ireland to Israel and Jehovah's battle with the serpent Leviathan.

"But it was upon the last assaults by the Hebrews and eventually by the Christians of the first centuries after Christ that the religion was finally suppressed and nearly forgotten," says Merlin Stone. The struggle rages still in the pages of the Bible, pages that as a girl amazed and fascinated me, with their constant emphasis on whores, whores of Babylon, whores of Sodom and Gomorrah, whores like Lilith and Jezebel, painted whores to be spurned by the sons and daughters of Israel. I had thought it then a sort of kink, a kind of mental aberration common to Jews and Christians. Not at all. The truth is far more tangible. The whore was the Goddess, the old religion. The sin — adherence to the old religion. The real sin — ignorance of paternity, female promiscuity.

And that whole battle, so bitterly fought over so many years, produced as its apogee the fable of the Garden of Eden. There is the serpent, creature of the Goddess, of the old religion. There is Eve, the woman, handmaiden to the Goddess and traitress at the heart of the new religion, potentially promiscuous and, therefore, potentially the underminer of male power, of patrilineal descent. She must be warned, threatened, terrified in order to save Adam from the temptations of the Goddess. If she will not accept a male God and reject the Goddess, if she will not accept one man and one man only, all her life, she will be thrown out of Paradise and bear her children in agony.

Price for Concession

It is all there in The Paradise Papers and, for me at least, Merlin Stone crystallizes what has all along been obvious, however apparently submerged. Even today, in the dour Protestant religions, the last lingering trace of the Goddess (Mary, carefully a virgin) is hardly allowed to surface. The Catholics, always more opportunist, gave Mary her place in the sun but exacted from the ordinary woman a terrible price for this concession.

Yesterday, I thought the leaders of all contemporary religions a blind and prejudiced lot for their refusal to allow women any more power within their churches than the arrangement of flowers upon the altars. Now I know they are simply afraid, afraid that the Goddess may return from her long exile and take over again, and that is curiously comforting, an explanation from weakness rather than strength.

This, then, was the original battle of the sexes. A Goddess reigned for thousands of years, a God for two thousand. Shall we soon, perhaps learn to do without either?

Scientists Give Go-ahead on 'Awesome' New Genes Technology

By NICHOLAS WADE
The Washington Post

A new and adventuresome technology is about to be unleashed on the world by way of guidelines issued at the command of the head of a minor U.S. federal agency.

The technology is based on a method for creating new forms of life, a prerogative hitherto reserved for evolution. Whereas new organisms arise in nature through the slow and haphazard reshuffling of genes, the method now available enables the scientist to manipulate the genetic material directly by a technique of cutting and splicing. This technique presents benefits and risks on a scale probably comparable with those of harnessing the atom. Just as at the dawn of the nuclear age, the benefits, which are easily visible and near at hand, appear at present to outweigh the more nebulous and seemingly distant hazards.

It would be untrue to say that the scientific community is divided on the merits of pushing ahead with the development of the technology. Most scientists believe that the dangers are negligible or can be contained. In fact, the present plans to proceed, in the form of guidelines, issued this month by the director of the National Institutes of Health, have only two serious critics.

Yet the critics happen to be two of the most distinguished of all the scientists involved in the decision-making process. Also, unlike many of their colleagues, they have no personal interest in using the new techniques in their own research.

Robert Sinsheimer, a member of the National Academy of Sciences and chairman of the biology division at Cal-Tech, commented recently of the proposed NIH guidelines: "Obviously neither I nor anyone else can say that if the present committee guidelines are adopted, disaster will ensue. I will say, though, that in my judgment, if the guidelines are adopted and nothing untoward happens, we will owe this success far more to good fortune than to human wisdom."

And Erwin Chargaff of Columbia University, who holds the National Medal of Science, points out that new forms of life, once created, cannot be recalled from nature. "Have we the right to counteract, irreversibly, the evolutionary wisdom of millions of years, in order to satisfy the ambition and curiosity of a few scientists?" he asks in a letter to Science. To do so, he believes, is a folly and a crime, an attack on the biosphere "so unthinkable to previous generations, that I could only wish that mine had not been guilty of it."

What has made the new technology possible is not so much man's cleverness as the accidental discovery of something in nature, a class of bacterial enzymes endowed with quite unexpected properties. The enzymes constitute a molecular-level scissors-and-paste kit for cutting and splicing the genetic material with undreamed of precision.

The technique of assembling new genetic messages — known as "recombinant DNA" molecules — is a powerful research tool that will doubtless bring its earliest users a crop of Nobel prizes and the like. It also offers a cornucopia of practical applications in the form of custom designing organisms for use in industry, agriculture and medicine.

Instead of rushing ahead to exploit the technique, however, the scientific community has shown a notable degree of responsibility. Scientists first drew attention to the hazards two years ago when a group of American researchers called for a voluntary moratorium until appropriate safety conditions could be established. Scientists throughout the world have observed the moratorium, and will probably follow closely the NIH guidelines that will bring it to an end.

And yet, despite the two years of self-restraint and conscience-wringing, the Institute's new guidelines will allow almost all but the most wildly dangerous experiments to proceed under strict but not grossly inconvenient safety conditions. The public has had little effective opportunity to share in the decision-making process, and the fundamental objections of inside critics such as Sinsheimer and Chargaff have been ignored without being specifically rebutted.

What are the dangers of the new technique and the technology that will sprout up from it? First, the new forms of life can be expected to escape quite regularly, particularly from the less meticulous laboratories. Even the most careful scientists become exposed to the organisms they work with, and the best available containment methods used in the Army's biological warfare laboratories at Fort Dietrich, for example, did not prevent 423 cases of infection and three deaths over a period of 25 years.

Escape is made more certain by the circumstance that the bacterium to be used as host for many of the new life forms is Escherichia coli, a common inhabitant of the human gut and nose. If a human pandemic or some other "worst case" accident occurs, future historians will never be able to understand why of all the bacterial species at our disposal, we made the most reckless possible choice. They will not credit the reason, that the human gut bacterium was simply the most convenient organism available at the time.

Most of the new life forms will perish outside the laboratory, unless deliberately designed to survive. But some may find suitable niches, in our crop plants, in our domestic animals, or in human populations. At worst, the consequences could range from mass infection to the virtual eradication of a species.

People worry about the proliferation of nuclear technology to more than a handful of countries. The "recombinant DNA" technique puts what will one day become an almost equally awesome technology into the hands of every biological researcher with access to a modern laboratory. Sooner or later, one of these researchers may try to put the technology to evil use. But more to be feared is the do-gooder who attempts to take some unilateral action for what he conceives to be the benefit of mankind.

Moral Leadership Top Priority: Trudeau On Summit

By MARJORIE NICHOLS
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Solution to specific economic problems in industrialized democracies is secondary to the fundamental challenge to provide moral leadership, Prime Minister Trudeau said Monday at the close of the San Juan economic summit conference.

In a brief closing statement to the conference and later during an airborne news conference en route back to Ottawa, the prime minister put forward his thesis.

"In the long run," he said, "it's less important to be successful economically than to preserve the institutions of democracy upon which our liberty is founded."

During his news conference on board an Armed Forces Boeing 707, Trudeau dismissed any assessment that San Juan was just an exercise in backslapping among the leaders of the world's seven leading industrial democracies.

"If you got that impression," said the prime minister, "it's probably erroneous . . . I think what is perhaps happening is that the industrialized democracies are looking for ways to provide leadership in the world.

"There are competing ideologies in the world today — certainly the group of underdeveloped countries is looking at democracy as something which they don't believe very much in."

The prime minister said this skepticism was not limited to the underdeveloped nations. "Our own people in our own countries are going through sort of a crisis of confidence in democracy . . ." he said "You know, the shock of Watergate and the scandals and so on."

The official communique issued by the seven nations attending the summit — Canada, the U.S., West Germany, Britain, France and Japan — was extraordinarily general.

It said the seven had affirmed that "the interdependence of our destinies makes it necessary for us to approach common economic problems with a sense of common purpose and to work mutually consistent economic strategies through better cooperation."

There was a consensus that there had been a broadly based economic recovery since the last summit at Rambouillet, France seven months ago. The seven also emphasized their conviction to act co-operatively to maintain recovery without inciting a new round of inflation.

"The needed stability in underliying economic and financial conditions clearly has not yet been restored," the communique said.

"Our commitment to deliberate, orderly and sustained expansion, and the indispensable companion goal of defeating inflation provides the bases of increased stability."

There were, however, no specific proposals for action. The proposal put a day earlier by U.S. President Ford for establishment of a new special fund to aid ailing democracies — specifically, Italy — was not mentioned in the final communique. Indeed, the Canadian delegation was the only one that mentioned the Ford proposal.

Trudeau said in answer to reporters that the seven leaders had made no firm arrangements to meet again at a similar summit, or to "institutionalize" the forum. He indicated, however, that he was confident Canada would again be on the guest list should another conference be held.

At his news conference, the prime mnister warned in effect that if the wealthy democracies cannot come to some ration plan for action to help the underdeveloped nations, they will turn in increasing numbers away from democracy and toward Communism.

Weekend Cons Book-Off 'Sick'

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Persons sentenced to serve weekend jail terms calling the lockup to say they are "sick" and can't show up, is news to Justice Minister Ron Basford.

He told the Commons Monday he recently completed meetings with the 10 attorneys-general and the matter was not mentioned.

"If there have been complaints made I will examine those complaints. But I think there generally have not been complaints. Such a technique — weekend jail terms — where appropriate, is a desirable one," said Basford.

The four-year-old federal program of weekend jail sentences is an "administrative nightmare," Dan McKenzie (PC — Winnipeg South Centre) informed the Commons.

The Winnipeg Free Press has made a survey across the country and found that the weekend jail sentence program is not working.

"The officials in different provinces all have the same complaint," said McKenzie.

"The deputy director of the British Columbia Correctional Institute has stated he has been complaining for four years. The minister should investigate this."

One third of those serving weekend jail terms are not showing up and also many of the prisoners arrive drunk or under the influence of drugs the survey showed.

McKenzie tried unsuccessfully to introduce a motion into the House to have the minister make a report and if necessary rescind the legislation allowing weekend jail sentences.

The member failed to get the required unanimous consent.

Basford said he understood there were press reports.

McKenzie said statements have been made by Superintendent J. M. Gillingham of the Headingley Correctional Institute in Manitoba that the four-year-old federal program is an "administrative nightmare."

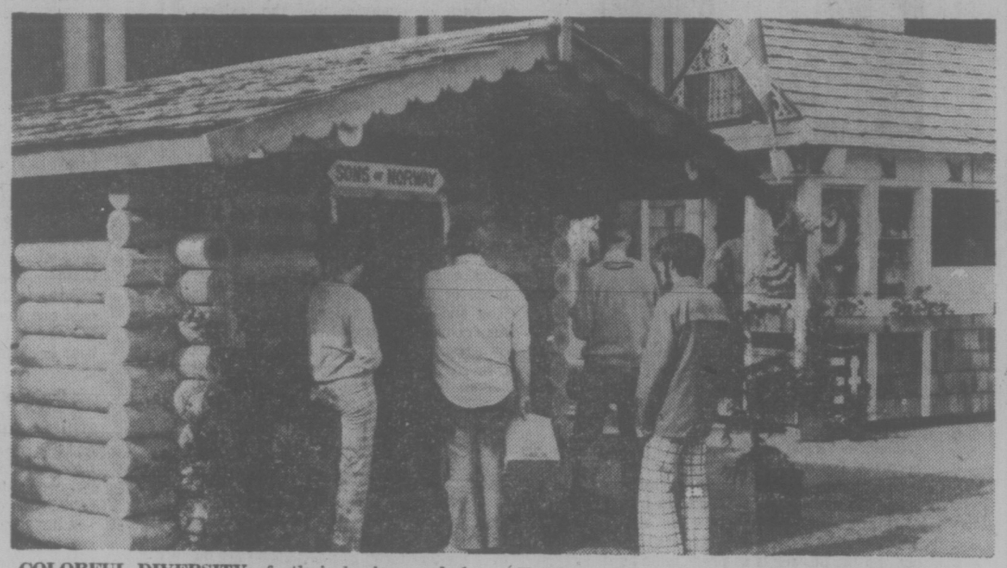
Magistrates have been called on to stop handing out weekend prison sentences because they are "impossible to administer," said the member.

He said this complaint was made by Harold Gyless, chief justice of the Manitoba Provincial Judges Court.

The judge said the plan is "a dream of the federal government — it's great in theory, but it doesn't work in practice."

The Winnipeg Free Press reported Headingly Correctional Institute deputy superintendent Al Carruthers as saying that the weekend sentences are "a headache and a messy type of management to look after."

The newspaper making a survey across the country found other insititution officials agreeing that the weekend jail sentence plan was a flop.



COLORFUL DIVERSITY of ethnic backgrounds is represented in the Carling Foundation International Village, which attracted big noon-hour crowds to Centennial Square for the opening day Monday. STUDENTS PUSH FOR CENTRE

Victoria could get a multicultural centre as a result of a study being done by three University of Victoria students.

All members of the Intercultural Association of Greater Victoria — representing 30 organized ethnic groups — the students are on a 12-week federal grant to look into setup of a centre.

a 12-week federal grant to look into setup of a centre.

"It wouldn't take the place of existing centres. The idea is to have a centre as a link between groups," grant worker Marta Hladyshevsky said.

The Ukrainian student is working alongside Chinese student Maria Tam and Tibetan student P. C. Tethong.

They will report to federal secretary of state department officials who authorized more than $4,000 for the study.

To reach as many people as possible of different ethnic backgrounds, program workers have prepared a questionnaire, available this week at the Centennial Square International Village.

More Political Action Urged by Paper Men

MONTREAL (CP) — The young Canadian Paperworkers Union must step up its political activity to combat increased government intervention in the collective bargaining process, delegates to the 55,000-member union's first constitutional conference were told Monday.

CPU predisent Henri Lorrain told the conference that even when the federal anti-inflation program of selective wage and price controls is lifted, "I am not convinced that we will see the end of a strong federal presence in the Canadian economy as it related to collective bargaining."

In addition, Lorrain said, "it is not at all unlikely that the federal government, through consultation and agreement with the provinces, will attempt to work out new policies to regulate the exploitation of all natural resources, including our forests."

The union must examine methods for worker participation in decisions on capital investment, marketing, pricing and personnel matters.

Lorrain also told a news conference: "It is time that industrial relations joined the jet age. Some of us have been using th Model-T Ford approach."

He said the lengthy and costly strikes which recently hit the pulp and fpaper industry across the country "might have been avoided if we, the work force, had some power and some input and some control over production."

Two groups of manufacturers — the Consolidated Bathurst Co. and the Eastern Canada Newsprint Group — had indicated a willingness to "explore new concepts in industrial relations."

"I don't know what the rest of the industry will do . . . but I would like to think that the industry as a whole has learned a lesson," Lorrain said.

"We had a very bitter strike . . . and we must explore new approaches."

Not So Bad, After All

VANCOUVER (CP) — That 60-year-old Swede isn't as fit as the federal government would like you to believe, the Canadian Pediatric Society was told Monday.

"I would like to expel a myth the government of Canada and -physical educators are propagating that Sweden is the mecca of fitness," Dr. Gordon Cummings, a Winnipeg cardiologist, told the annual meeting.

"We Canadians are no worse than anybody else."

He said the statics often quoted of a 30-year-old Canadian being only as fit as a person twice his age in Sweden come from a specific Swedish study.

The statistics ignore subsequent studies that show the average Swede is a bit low on the fitness chart — just like the average Canadian.

Dr. Cummings said more emphasis should be placed on physical fitness programs for people after they leave school.

Ads Opposing Sale of Zeller's

MONTREAL (CP) — An unidentified group has launched an advertising campaign to oppose the sale of Zeller's Ltd. to Fields Stores Ltd. of Vancouver.

Advertisements opposing the sale and signed by a group of concerned Zeller's shareholders are appearing in 17 newspapers across Canada.

Raymond Paros, partner in a Montreal law firm placing the ads, declined to identify sponsors and said they would make themselves known once shareholder reaction has been determined.

Paros said that while the number of shares represented by about 40 persons who have phoned in sympathy with the campaign have not been counted, they totalled "many thousands."

Zeller's is a national retailer based in Montreal which recorded after-tax earnings of $7.1 million on sales of $396.9 million in 1975.

A United States bankruptcy court last week approved the sale to Fields of the majority holdings in Zeller's held by W. T. Grant Co., a large U.S. retailer that went bankrupt.

Fields offered $32,675,000 for Grant's holdings in Zeller's, which represent 50.1 per cent of the 12,762,255 shares.

A second company, Macleod Stedman Ltd. of Winnipeg, offered $35 million but the higher bid was apparently refused because of uncertainty over whether it would be approved by the Foreign Investment Review Agency.

Macleod Stedman is owned by Gamble-Skogmo Inc., of Minneapolis, Minn.

Safety Bid Vetoed

QUADRA ISLAND — Fire chief Alex Mercier attempts to impose adequate fire prevention standards on the island have been rebuffed, with the result that an investigation into the safety of home heating installations has been dropped.

An issue developed last April when Mercier and Sam Hooley, former director of Area J for the Comox-Strathcona Regional District, publicly condemned the number of homes using unsafe heating devices.

Hooley has since resigned over ratepayer opposition to the National Building Code standard which he tried to introduce on the island. Mercier recently acknowledged that he has no authority to impose regulations in private homes.

The chief of the Quadra Island Volunteer Fire Department is now recommending "a little common sense" and requesting that residents have respect for the safety of neighbors and their properties.

He indicated he has pointed out the problems and offered suggestions as to ways individuals might protect their own well-being, but "the rest is up to them," he said.

Jim Shot on Both Sides Keeps Date With Queen

LONDON (CP) — Six Alberta Indian chiefs and their wives, in full traditional dress, went to Buckingham Palace in a streamlined bus today for an audience with the Queen.

The Queen, in a jolly mood, entertained them in a ground-floor reception room overlooking the sweeping palace gardens.

The chiefs, with such evocative names as Leo Pretty Young Man and Jim Shot On Both Sides, conveyed greetings on the 100th anniversary of two important Indian treaties signed with Queen Victoria, "The Great White Mother."

Although Indians have frequently participated in royal visits in various parts of Canada, this is their first visit outside Canada for the express purpose of conveying greetings to their sovereign.

Their arrival at the palace also brought out the crowds. In a sudden departure from practice, the Queen allowed news photographers to be admitted briefly to photograph her with her colorful visitors.

The treaties, signed in 1876 and 1877, ceded to the Crown about 163,000 square miles of what now is central and southern Alberta and central Saskatchewan in return for certain "rights, gifts and annuities."

The area is twice the size of England and Scotland.

But the Indians clearly bear no ill-will toward the Crown.

During the visit the Indians will be guests of the Lord Mayor of London, the Lord Provost of Edinburgh and the solicitor-general for Scotland.

Big Changes Coming, Partner

BUSINESS 'BARELY PUNISHED'

The royal commission on corporate concentration was told Monday that once corporations are convicted of breaking the law, they should be put out of business.

Elmer McEwan, a Victoria businessman, told the commission that corporations convicted of law-breaking are barely punished. He said when they are proven guilty of wrong-doings, "that should be the end of it."

McEwan said if government does not legislate against law-breaking corporations, "they will go out and get someone elected who will protect them."

School teacher Wilson Merrill, who along with McEwan and about eight others presented informal briefs to commissioners Yves Beriault of Montreal and Robert Dickerson of Vancouver, said the public should have as much, if not more, access to information on corporation goings-on as it does to governmental affairs.

The commission is to sit tonight in Prince George, the last stop on its cross-country fact-finding mission.

Beriault said the commission's report on concentration of power in big business would be ready for presentation to the government by the end of the year.

Most people have probably never heard of the Partnership Act, let alone read it.

And it would appear that goes for most people in partnerships or proprietorships, too. Or else they would realize, for instance, their businesses should be registered with the Companies Office.

The fact is, few seem to know about the regulation or, if they do, they choose to ignore it.

And that's upsetting to the provincial corporate and financial services branch — so upsetting, the branch has begun a thorough review of the act with the ultimate goal of recommending sweeping changes.

Dennis Sheppard, associate deputy minister in charge of the branch, says the act has lain forgotten for decades, gathering dust, a remnant of the old English laissez-faire law of the 19th century.

It was time it was updated and modernized, he suggests.

The study will take several months. Sheppard doesn't expect a proposed new Partnership Act will be ready for probably a year.

There are two main aims in making the wholesale revisions, Sheppard says.

One is to try to find some way of getting more partnerships to register with the Companies Office.

The other is to decide what to do about limited partnerships which are popular with big-money investors in high-risk undertakings, often for the tax advantage alone.

Sheppard says the act as it now stands is impossible to enforce. Although there is provision to fine negligent partnerships, none have been taken to court, at least not in recent years. The reason is there are just too many partnerships failing to comply with the requirements of the act.

A survey conducted two summers ago in Victoria showed only 20 per cent of the partnerships in the city were registered.

"If that was the situation here, where the Companies Office is located, I'd hate to think what it was like in a place such as the East Kootenays," Sheppard says.

Sheppard doesn't feel the situation has improved much over the past two years.

The problem he says, is most partnerships think that getting a business licence is all they have to do.

And as far was most municipalities are concerned, it is.

Victoria is only one municipality in this area — perhaps in the province — that is automatically checking with the Companies Office to make sure partnerships are registered before granting a business licence.

In Saanich, Oak Bay, Esquimalt, even Vancouver, the Companies Office is rarely, if ever, approached in this regard.

Sheppard believes partnerships should be compelled to register.

"I feel I, or anyone else, should be able to know who's behind any business. If I go out and buy, say, some poison meat and get sick, whom do I take action against? There has to be a public record to tell me who."

Sheppard says the proposed revisions to the act will incorporate a "bigger stick and a carrot" to make partnerships more mindful of their responsibilities.

The question of liability is the focus of attention in the examination of limited partnerships, Sheppard says.

Under the present act a limited partner is only liable for the money he puts up and not for any action that might be brought against the partnership.

It's an anomalous situation. In a general partnership all partners are fully and equally liable.

The limited partnership, popular with companies involved in oil and gas exploration, works to the advantage of the limited partner who has a lot of money and is willing to gamble.

His advantage is he can write off his investment as a tax deduction. It's a savings of a kind because the difference between what he would have had to pay in tax and the amount he does pay after deducting his investment works out that he is risking only 35 to 50 cents on each dollar, depending on his income bracket.

The risk he takes may still be a large one, but if, for example, the oil well strikes pay dirt, he's paid back many times over.

Sheppard agrees it is somewhat analogous to a racehorse owner betting on his horse to win and then being able to deduct the amount of the bet on his tax return.

He says the federal government's recent offering of 100 per cent tax write-off on all oil and gas exploration gives "a shot in the arm" to limited partnerships.

"There is nothing wrong with limited partnerships," he says. "If you want to encourage investments in any high-risk area, there's probably no better way."

STRATEGIC MARRIAGES?

PORT LOUIS, Mauritius (UPI) — The Organization of African Unity today accused France of a bizarre plot to retain possession of a strategic Indian Ocean island by forcibly marrying off local girls to occupying French troops.

OAU spokesman Peter Onu issued a statement charging French authorities on the tiny island of Mayotte were deliberately forcing local girls to marry some of the 3,000 occupying French troops.

Onu said the marriages were "changing the demographic character of the island so that in future years it will be full of white children."

Smoking. What are you going to do about it?

If you've given up smoking more times than you'd like to remember, the chances are you enjoy it so much you don't want to give it up at all.

The question is, what are you going to do about it?

You've probably tried cigarettes that promise extra mildness and found yourself checking every once in a while to see if they were still lit. Which brought you right back to your regular brand.

Now, there is Vantage.

Vantage gives you the taste you want. The full, rich flavour of Virginia tobaccos. But here's the big difference. Only Vantage has the specially designed filter that gives you so much of what you want in a cigarette with a lot less of what you don't want.

Vantage is not a heavy drag cigarette. You don't have to work hard getting the smoke through so that all the joy of smoking is lost.

Rich taste and easy draw. Good reasons for any thoughtful smoker to consider the new cigarette called Vantage.

We suggest you try a pack.

Warning: Health and Welfare Canada advises that danger to health increases with amount smoked—avoid inhaling. 11 mg. "tar" 0.8 mg. nicotine.

Anyone seen grey squirrels in and around Victoria?

If so, curator of mammals Charlie Guiguet of the Provincial Museum, would appreciate receiving reports of sightings. He's keeping a record of the squirrel population and watching to see if they are expanding their territory.

The reason for all this is because the grey squirrel is not a native of Vancouver Island, and for that matter, nor British Columbia. But it seems in the fall of 1966, the Vandermeer Game Farm in Metchosin acquired two females and a male grey squirrel from Ontario. The animals escaped accidentally shortly after they were brought here.

Since then they have multiplied. Douglas Wood of Victoria, in 1974 reported sighting several families of grey squirrels at widely separated locations in the Metchosin area. Some 12 free-living individuals are also said to appear regularly for handouts at Weir's Beach.

Mrs. Rippon happened to mention that perhaps it was too Canadian for the U.S. publishers. Then Clark Irwin, the Toronto house, heard about it and asked to have a look at the ms.

The book, The House on Indigo Street, is now in the hands of Clark Irwin's editorial board.

Mrs. Rippon said the psychological mysteries published by Doubleday were set in France, while Indigo Street was set in Vancouver's Gastown.

But Doubleday hasn't totally rejected the Victoria writer. They've recently published another of her mysteries, The Ninth Tentacle — her third in the past 10 years.

The members of the legislature appeared to have lost their heads for a short while Monday during a motion by Opposition leader David Barrett to hold an emergency debate. There were cries and shouts and members leaping to their feet like so many jack-in-the-boxes.

So what does that preceptive preceptor of parliamentary decorum, Speaker Ed Smith, urge on our erstwhile illustrious representatives of the vox populi? That would they all please keep their seats.

It is small wonder so many people think the law's an ass, for that seems to be the only part of our legislator's anatomy deemed worthy of preserving.

Tight Reins Hurting UVic

SCHOOL'S OUT and idle young minds have moved to the devil's playground as evidenced by kids who climbed onto the roof at Goodwill Enterprises on Bay Street and changed the foot-high letters — much to amusement of Goodwill nurse Maxine Martelli. (Bill Halkett photo)

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Unless governments loosen their tight economic reins the standard of education at the University of Victoria will deteriorate next year, UVic president Howard Petch said Monday.

"This year it's very tight and looks bad," Petch said. "But next year the academic development at this university is going to be hurt. There's no getting around it."

Citing Education Minister Pat McGeer's announcement that a special universities' grant given this year will not be alloted next year, Petch said all indications were that the situation was not going to change.

UVic is starting two new programs this year — schools of social work and nursing — and are entering the second year of its new and expensive law school and the third year of the school of public administration.

Any new university program takes at least four years to get into full swing — one year to set up and three years of additional staff and resources as students progress towards finishing their degree.

"Today a minimal law library costs $1.5 million," Petch said, pointing out just one cost factor. UVic received no special capital grant for the library, so the law library will have to come out of the operating budget.

And each year new programs need twice as many professors since the courses double their enrolment as first-year students move to second year and a flock of first year students enter the program.

This year most faculties are limiting enrolment, but those restrictions aren't half as bad as they are for new programs.

The UVic caldendar says the new school of social work will allow a maximum of 35 students. Now Petch isn't sure if the program has the resources to handle this many.

Petch told the director of the nursing school to start the year with the absolute minimum and only a very few students will be allowed in the program.

The law school, instead of growing larger, has been cut by almost half the number of students expected to enter the first year.

Of the 870 applicants for the law school last year, 72 were accepted for the program. Of the same number expected to apply this year, 44 will be allowed in.

"If we were the size of UBC we could accommodate one such new program," Petch said. "But we are the smallest university with the smallest budget and we just can't do four new programs."

Petch also said it was improtant to realize that the new programs weren't all the university's doing. "The previous education minister (Eileen Dailly in the NDP government) asked us to start these programs and gave us a small amount of money. Now we're committed but we don't have the funds," he said.

Petch said the disbursment of funds through the 11-man government appointed universities council is partly to blame.

PETCH
. . . Academic warning

That body gets all the government funds and distributes them to the province's three public universities — UVic, UBC and SFU.

Petch is not happy with the allotment given to UVic, "The council of universities is not committed to our new programs and they give us, we feel, a pretty poor deal in funds."

UBC received $99.3 million, SFU $35.9 million and UVic $27.6 million. "I just can't understand that sort of differential." Petch said. Neither of the other two universities has anywhere near the number of new programs UVic does.

Operating costs for the new programs don't grow at nine per cent per annum as is usual, he said, but take big jump seach year.

In the allotment from the universities council there is no breakdown of what the funds are for and why they were distributed in the way they were, although Petch has repeatedly asked for a breakdown. Petch wonders if the council members themselves even bother with a breakdown.

And he wonders why there is no extra money for the university starting all the new and expensive programs.

He said the law applicants turned away from UVic have nowhere else to go.

And it's almost impossible for a B.C. student to get training in optometry, he said.

The only English speaking Canadian school of optometry is at Waterloo University in Ontario. The other western provinces have a contract with that university to pay for their students who go there for optometry training.

But B.C. has no such contract so there is very little chance for a B.C. student to get accepted to the program.

Petch has wanted a school of opometry at UVic from the day he first took the job here in 1974.

But it will just have to wait a little longer. There's no money available to set up the

Saanich Residents Sink Developer's Parking Lot

Residents of Stoba Lane in Saanich turned out en mass Monday to scuttle a Vancouver developer's plans to build a parking lot on their cul-de-sac street.

They also stopped his plans to put more commercial area in a three-storey building now under construction on the adjacent property which fronts on Quadra.

Architect Bing Marr of Bing Marr and Associates applied for rezoning to allow a 16-space parking lot to be built adjacent to the new building.

Original plans called for office space on the first floor and apartments on the two storeys above.

Marr told the public hearing a change of plans would have the space for five cars under the building used for office space and the main floor assigned for retail outlets instead. He promised to install a fence and landscaping as required by council.

"It's not a parking lot that's being approved, it's expansion of commercial," observed resident Ken Bantesko. He said those living in the apartments would be surrounded by blacktop if the parking lot was approved. He said the lot would be better used to provide the apartment dwellers with some greenbelt.

The council unanimously rejected Marr's application.

An application for rezoning to build a parking lot at 3367 Oak Street to provide parking space for an adjacent office building received council's blessing.

Spokesman Robert Heath told council when the building was built two years ago an additional $30,000 was spent to allow for future expansion of an additional floor.

Heath promised the two parcels would be consolidated and agreed he and his partners would provide curbs, gutters and land allowance as set down by council.

Approval was also given to build a duplex immediately behind 2230 Edgelow, on condition the developer provided 10-foot side allowances in that order cars could be parked in the rear of the building.

The building will be strata title.

An application to build a duplex on the northwest corner of Quadra and Nicholson was tabled, however, until council's new guidelines for duplex development are completed and ratified. The lot is 7,000 square feet and the municipality's planning department is recommending that lots be a minimum of 8,000 square feet.

Acting mayor Sandy Noel cast the deciding vote.

Go Public, Ease Taxes Council Tells Academy

Supporters of the Victoria Riding Academy were advised Monday one way in which the financially-pressed recreation facility could get some tax easement would be to have it run by an association.

Oak Bay council, sitting as a committee-as-a-whole with Ald. John Goult as chairman, told the supporters a written brief submitted by them will be dealt with at the next regular council meeting.

The aldermen suggested the supporters should be able to tell council whether or not they will form an association and how much responsibility they are prepared to assume at that meeting.

The academy owes $8,218 for 1976 taxes. This, plus the $200 rent paid monthly brings the total bill payable to Oak Bay to $10,618 for the year.

Ald. Doug Watts raised the ire of academy supporters when he said academy operators Don and Aileen Carley, after Oak Bay bought the property for $112,500 were allowed to stay on "as a retirement hobby for 10 years or so . . . obviously they can't go on for ever."

"To say it is a retirement hobby for the Carleys is way out of order," retorted David Campbell, "There are 200 or 300 children there on Saturdays. It's the only place you can get — or rent — riding horses in this area. What's so wrong in subsidizing another recreation facility?"

He added, "We want to keep it as a recreation facility for Oak Bay . . . whether you run it, the Carleys, or Shirley Dowell runs it."

Mayor Brian Smith pointed out the Municipal Act prevents the academy getting any tax relief because, whether or not it is making or losing money, it is being operated as a business by the Carleys. He suggested that if an association ran the academy, it might change the picture.

In their brief the academy supporters list 10 improvements carried out on the Cedar Hill Cross Road property and another four that are either being planned or carried out.

Council Rejects Strata Duplexes

Lack of rental units and how to accept a day care centre without condoning it were among the problems discussed at Esquimalt town council committee meetings Monday.

Aldermen will recommend to the regular board meeting next week that two applications to convert two duplexes to single-family dwellings under the Strata Tites Act be turned down.

Esquimalt has lifted an earlier moratorium on conversions, but during discussion, aldermen said there was still such a low number of available rental units in the area that both applications should be rejected.

They also rejected an application to turn a 29,000-square-foot parcel of land at 946 Selkirk into six small single-family dwelling lots.

Aldermen said townhouses should be built on that property, and will ask the developer — Vancouver Island Development Corporation — to design something more in line with the original plan for the land.

Councillors had difficulty handling a request by the Esquimalt pre-school co-operative for permission to use some municipal land next to the school's new headquarters as a free play area.

The pre-school will be operating out of the Bethel Tabernacle, 1100 Colville Rd. The adjacent municipal land is designated access to the Gorge Vale Golf course.

While agreeing to the need for pre-schools, aldermen said they weren't in a position to give anyone official permission to use land dedicated as roadway.

VGH Cuts Costs By Cutting Menus

Victoria General Hospital may be able to save as much as $250,000 a year by taking the choice of meals away from patients next week.

Royal Jubilee Hospital is also examining changes in meal options now given patients as both hospitals struggle with cost-cutting measures in the face of acute budget squeezes.

Starting next Tuesday patients at Victoria General will no longer select their choice from two main courses and three or four desserts. They will be asked to indicate when they enter hospital which beverage they prefer.

The choice on meals left to them will be whether they want large, average or small portions.

It's difficult to accurately measure how much money will be saved because selective menus involve part of the work of a number of different personnel, Garth Gloeckler, director of planning and hospital services, said today.

The changes will trim some labor for nursing staff, ward clerks, dietary clerks and cooks, for example.

Waterskier Recovering

Thomas Murphy, 23, of Victoria was reported in good condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital this morning recovering from injuries he received in a freak waterskiing accident on Shawnigan Lake Sunday.

Witnesses said Murphy was in the water waiting to be picked up when the bow of the pick-up boat got caught in the wind, struck him and dragged him into the propellor where he cut his arm and leg.

According to witnesses, boat passenger Mike Jones, also of Victoria, jumped into the water and helped Murphy to safety.

BREAD UP 3c

The price of bread is up three cents a loaf in Victoria today, McDonald's Bread manager John McDonald said today.

He said the company is passing along increased costs, including fuel, light and power and an increase of $10,000 in property taxes.

The increase followed a hike in January when McDonald's and McGavin Toastmaster, the parent company, told the Anti-Inflation Board a further increase would be necessary in about 90 days.

McDonald said the new wholesale prices are 53 cents for 50.75 for a 24-ounce loaf and 37 cents from 35.5 for a 16-ounce loaf. Suggested retail prices are 64 cents, up from 61 cents for a 24-ounce loaf. The 16-ounce loaf probably will go to 45 from 43 cents, he said.

McDonald said costs have risen high enough to justify even further increases but there was no immediate plan to seek a hike above the new level.

The increase discussed with the AIB at the beginning of the year took effect at the beginning of June.

Nothing's as Certain as . . .

With only one day left before the deadline for payment of property taxes expires, municipal tax offices in the Greater Victoria area were coping with long line-ups of late payers today and expecting more of the same Wednesday.

Over the last week to 10 days the tempo of payment has varied considerably from municipality to municipality.

While Saanich has been kept moderately busy, according to officials, in Victoria prior to Monday the cash inflow was "very slow."

"It was the worst I had ever seen it," commented tax collector Frank Robinson.

"We didn't know if it meant they were all leaving it until the last minute or that they just weren't going to pay."

But on Monday there was a sharp increase in activity and Robinson said there was nothing to indicate the taxpayers were witholding payment, despite predictions of such action to protest tax increases as high as 20 per cent this year.

Saanich comptroller-treasurer Roy Broughton expressed a similar view. "I think people are resigned to the fact that they pay, regardless," he said.

He noted that 75 to 80 per cent of the municipality's total property taxes come from mortgage companies, which are habitually late payers.

Any tax bills unpaid after municipal offices close Wednesday will automatically attract a five per cent penalty.

MERCURY JUDGED NO HAZARD

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Levels of mercury contamination in native Indians living in the Pinchi Lake area are not enough to be a health hazard, officials say.

Intensive testing of Indians at Pinchi Lake, near Fort St. James about 100 miles northwest of here, began in November, 1975, after results of a Canada-wide random survey in 1973 showed above-average levels of mercury contamination.

Dr. John Murie, assistant regional director of the federal health department, said Friday in a telephone interview that blood samples now show an average contamination level of 17.5 parts per billion (PPB).

He said that anything over 20 PPB indicates food intake has some mercury contamination, and 100 PPB is a high risk.

Dr. Murie said one person recorded 50.8 PPB in November, but when re-tested in March, showed a level of 27.3 PPB.

He said the department does not consider mercury levels in the people tested a risk to health, but testing will continue.

Earlier, fishing was banned on Pinchi Lake because of high levels of mercury contamination in the fish.

The mercury is attributed to a Cominco Ltd. mercury mine near the lake which used to dump untreated tailings into the lake, and to natural deposits of mercury in the area.

GRANISLE WOMEN DROP PROTEST

GRANISLE (CP) — Local women have backed off from protests against the 4½-month strike by 156 workers at Noranda Bell Copper's mine in this community 200 miles northwest of Prince George.

Twelve women entered a float in the annual Granisle Days parade earlier this month but Lucille Partington, who organized the parade protest, said the women have had pressure put on them to remain silent.

"We decided to take no more action because the village administrator asked us to cease all activity," she said. "He said any publicity like this is adverse publicity for Granisle."

Mrs. Partington said some members of the village council "came down heavy" on Sheila Parker, who took part in a float with a slogan reading Dead Like My Business. Mrs. Parker, who has a clothing shop in Granisle, said business has declined 50 per cent since the strike began Feb. 7.

Strikers Blast Pay, Conditions

VANCOUVER (CP) — Conditions are so bad at Skyway Luggage Co. that most Canadians wouldn't work there, says one of 105 workers, mostly immigrant women from Italy, who have been on strike since April 9.

The workers, members of the Upholsterers International Union, Local 1, have voted to close the plant rather than return for salaries slightly above the provincial minimum.

A woman, married with three children, says she was receiving $2.80 an hour when the strike began. Since then, the provincial minimum has increased to $3 an hour from $2.75.

"We want better wages and working conditions," she says, adding that the lunch room is small, the washrooms are dirty and that three of the four toilets provided for 80 women consistently don't work.

Company general manager Ray Kingston disputes union statements that the Seattle-based company made a profit of $7.5 million in 1974 and $10.7 million in 1975, but he refuses to give company figures on profits.

Kingston says paying the minimum wage is the pattern in the luggage industry.

"We are competing on a national level against luggage factories in Ontario and Quebec that pay less than we do," he says. "It's a matter of economics."

The union has asked for an increase of $3.50 an hour during a three-year agreement while the company has offered 70 cents more an hour in the same period.

Kingston says working conditions in the plant are adequate: "They have to be. They have to meet factory standards."

Most of the women say they are working at Skyway because it is close to home and they did not have to learn English to operate the machinery.

Two sets of contempt of court charges have been laid and seven strikers, as well as union and its business agent, have been fined a total of $2,700 for ignoring an injunction restricting picketing.

PEPIN SAYS NO

CRANBROOK (CP) — Striking mine workers have backed down on a sit-in demonstration here after the federal anti-inflation board called their bluff.

About 20 members of Local 292 of the United Mine Workers occupied the federal building Thursday and promised to stay there until board chairman Jean-Luc Pepin came to nearby Sparwood, where 600 members of the union have been on strike against Kaiser Resources Ltd. since May 16.

The demonstrators left the building Thursday night after the Canada Manpower office forwarded their demands by telegram to Pepin. The miners returned Friday morning to the sit-in.

Pepin refused by telegram Friday to come himself or send any senior board member.

56 Drug Charges

BURNABY (CP) — RCMP say that 20 persons were arrested Monday after warrants were issued for 38 persons on 56 drug charges following an undercover investigation. Fifty-one charges are for trafficking offences under the Narcotic Control Act, two are for trafficking offences under the Food and Drug Act, and three are charges of possession of narcotics.

School Gets $600

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lower Mainland residents have donate about $600 to Woodlands School for Retarded Children since about 900 chestnut seedlings from a downtown Habitat site donated to the school were picked up and taken home by pedestrians who were under the belief the seedlings were to be destroyed. The trees were to be used to landscape a raviene behind the school, with the remainder to be sold to pay for picnic tables.

Pickets Removed

HUDSONS HOPE (CP) — Pickets protesting hiring policy at the Site One power project here were removed Monday following an agreement during the weekend between the pickets and the labor council. Work was not interrupted during four days of picketing.

Squad Rushed Prison Inmates After 41 Sleepless Hours

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — The six-man tactical squad which stormed the area where three knife-wielding prisoners held 15 hostages at the British Columbia Penitentiary last June had not slept during the 41-hour drama, an inquest into the death of one of the hostages was told Monday.

Charles Steward McBeth, the highest-ranking guard on the squad, made the statement at the inquest into the death of Mary Steinhauser, the prison classification officer killed by a guard's bullet when the squad's rush took place.

McBeth told coroner Doug Jack and the jury that for much of their vigil the six men were in a room 14 feet from the siege area with no radio, no walkie-talkie and little communication with senior administrators.

He said that there was no relief squad becuase no one knew the incident would last so long, but a three-man squad was thought to be too small, so the six men worked without sleep.

McBeth said he was not present when the rush took place, and that no one was appointed in charge while he was away. He said the squad was under standing orders to rush the area if the three prisoners attempted to harm the hostages or the hostages attempted to escape.

McBeth, a 21-year veteran of the penitentiary staff, said he was meeting with prison security chief Fred Leach when the hostages made their bid for freedom, and that by the time he returned, the shooting was all over.

In other testimony, prison official Stanley Miller contradicted testimony given earlier by two of the prisoners involved in the incident.

Prisoners Andrew Bruce and Dwight Lucas said Miss Steinhauser had been given at least three chances to escape. They also said Lucas had been dragged into a vault and beaten into unconsciousness by guards after the shooting was over. Miller said both points were incorrect.

He also revealed that an assault was planned by the tactical squad for 11 p.m. June 10, about an hour before the hostages took action themselves. He said the plan was cancelled after a hostage vetoed the plan in sign language.

Claire Wilson, the third prisoner in the hostage-taking, has not testified.

POLICEMAN ON BAIL

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hon Kwing Shum, 55, an ex-Hong Kong policeman now living in Vancouver, who was arrested here last week on corruption charges, was released from jail over the weekend after four persons put up $250,000 worth of property for bail.

Hon spent five days behind bars. He is scheduled to appear in court again Wednesday.

Hon is charged under a fugitive warrant with collecting more than $2.3 million Hong Kong dollars ($450,000 Canadian) illegally when he was a detective sergeant in the Royal Hong Kong Police in 1971.

He now is facing extradition proceedings.

The bail was pledged by family and friends of Hon and covers the deeds on six houses.

Suk Ying Kan of Vancouver, the woman with whom he is living common-law, pledged $120,000; Hon's son, David Kan Hung Hon, and his wife, Alice Yoke Leng Hon, of Vancouver, pledged $48,500; and Rowina Fei-Fung Lui, a student at the University of British Columbia, pledged $81,500.

Private People Just Wrecking Salvage Firms

CALGARY (CP) — Spokesmen for auto-wrecking companies in the city says competition from private citizens is ruining their business.

Many private individuals are showing up at salvage auctions, bidding higher than auto wreckers are willing to pay, and snapping up vehicles with the idea of putting them back on the road or at least selling the parts.

"We spent eight years telling the provincial government this and demanding legislation to protect our business but they won't listen," said Roger Clarke, former president of the now-defunct Alberta Automobile Dismantlers' Association.

Clarke, owner of Clarke's Auto Parts Ltd., said he group folded last year "because of lack of interest."

He said something should be done by government to clean up the auto-wrecking business because the problem is becoming critical.

Auto wreckers say people who privately wreck and dismantle two or three cars a week — 40 or so a year — should be licensed and pay appropriate taxes.

The insurance companies who conduct the salvage auctions enjoy the competition between auto-wrecking firms and individuals because they end up with a better price per car.

A spokesman for Western Auto Wreckers agreed there should be government legislation to protect the industry, saying such legislation worked wonders in the United States, particularly California.

"Out there an individual needs a salvage permit to wreck a car," the spokesman said. Stiff fines were imposed if a person was found wrecking a car on residential property without a permit.

Jack Harris, owner of Harris Collision and Storage Ltd., one of two firms in the city who hold salvage auctions once a week, said he recognized the problem but "we have to get the best bids."

"I don't really know what the answer is for the established auto wreckers," Harris said. "I think the government should step in and do something."

"City hall says no car should be missing a wheel on any property in the city, but I can walk around Forest Lawn and Bowness and count hundreds of wrecked cars currently being worked on in backyards."

TO ZELLER'S SHAREHOLDERS

On June 23rd, 1976, the New York Bankrupcy Court approved sale of control of Zeller's Limited previously held by the W. T. Grant Company to Field's Stores Limited for $32,650,000 and rejected a bid by McLeod Stedman of $35 million.

The higher bid was rejected because McLeod Stedman had not in time been successful in getting clearance from FIRA.

Among our concerns with the Field's proposal is the way in which they, with sales of $85 million and net profits of $3 million, could finance the purchase of Zeller's control.

It is our opinion that the Field's control would not be in the interest of Zeller's or its shareholders whereas the McLeod Stedman group could bring much needed financial and management strength.

If you are like-minded and share our concern, please: telephone toll-free 112-800-361-6172 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. EST Monday, June 28th, to Thursday, July 1st and identify yourself and your shareholding.

If concern is widespread and can be identified by July 1, it may well be that some recourse can be found. This is, therefore, an exercise in corporate democracy in order to establish the interests of the majority. Time is clearly of the essence.

Tom Morris Joins Olympic Team

Times News Services

Tom Morris is the latest Victorian to be named to an Olympic team berth.

Morris today was selected to the Canadian cycling team for the Summer Games at Montreal beginning July 17. He was named to the road squad along with Marc Blouin of Quebec Brian Chewter of Hamilton, Gilles Durand of Montreal, Robert van den Eynde of Montreal, Pierre Harvey of Rimouski, Que., Robert Pelletier of Cap-de-la-Madeleine, Que., and Serge Proulx of Quebec.

The cycling track squad is composed of Louis Corbeil of Winnipeg., Ron Hayman of Vancouver, Andre Simard of Cap-de-la-Madeleine, Que., Adrian Prosser, Hamilton; Hugh Walton, Toronto; Jocelyn Lovell, Toronto; and Gordon Singleton, Niagara Falls, Ont.

Morris competed in the 1972 Olympics at Munich.

Other city and Island athletes named late Monday were sprinter Joyce Yakubowich, hammer thrower Murray Keating and javelin thrower Phil Olsen.

Yakubowich was a triple medal winner at the Pan-Am Games in Mexico last year. Keating is the Canadian record holder for the hammer throw while Olsen, from Nanaimo, has exceeded the Olympic standard in his specialty several times this year.

Yakubowich has been named to both women's relay teams as well as the 400 metres.

There was no selection for the 800 metres but as more names still may be recommended by the Canadian Track and Field Association, it is believed that Victoria's Tom Griffin has a chance to be selected.

Griffin has won two of three trial races although he has yet to surpass the Olympic qualifying standard of 1:47.4. However, that is not absolutely necessary as each country may enter one athlete for each event regardless of entry standards. If more than one is entered all must meet the standard.

Bob Bolitho of Victoria and Ray Telford of Nanaimo are on the Olympic soccer team. Greg Russell is a member of the men's volleyball team as is Tom Graham of Comox, a student at the University of Victoria.

Wanda Allan last week won a berth on the women's archery team. Philip Delesalle is on the men's gymnastics team which is coached by Victoria's John Herb.

Manager of the track and field team is Nanaimo's Andy Falconer. Billy Robinson of Chemainus is a member of the men's basketball team.

Thirty-nine men and 19 women were selected for the track team making it the largest ever.

Maurice Allan, Canadian Olympic team chef de mission, said this will be Canada's "finest team ever" and with other nominations to Olympic team many of which will be made final today, the Canadian team will be composed of more than 400 athletes and 100 officials.

DOING HIS OWN GROUND WORK, Mark "The Bird" Fidrych, Detroit Tigers' rookie pitcher, smooths out dirt on pitching mound to his own personal standards Monday night. Fidrych knew what he was doing as he won his eighth game in nine decisions, a 5-1 victory over American League leading New York Yankees. He allowed seven hits. See story. (AP wirephoto)

'The Bird' Is The Word For Tigertown's New Hero

DETROIT (AP) — The fans at ancient Tiger Stadium just didn't want it to end.

Mark (The Bird) Fidrych—probably the biggest drawing card to hit Detroit Tigers since Denny McLain—got a postgame standing ovation Monday night that rocked Tiger Stadium to its aging foundations.

It was reminiscent of the acclaim McLain got there in 1968 when he won his 30th game.

Fidrych, 21-year-old rookie who wasn't even on the spring training roster, had just pitched fourth-place Detroit to a 5-1 victory over New York in an American League baseball game, snapping the Yankees' winning streak at five.

It was the eighth victory in nine decisions for the fidgety right-hander and it was the eighth time he has gone all the way.

After Elrod Hendricks grounded out to end the game, Fidrych ran excitedly to the dugout. He doffed his cap to the cheering fans and shook hands with his teammates, the groundsmen and even an umpire.

He disappeared into the clubhouse and many in the crowd of nearly 48,000 chanted: "We want Bird! We want Bird!"

Fidrych, minus his shoes, hopped back on to the field to acknowledge the cheers.

The noisy followers finally went home, but the way they've seemed to take to Fidrych it's a good bet they'll be back in similar numbers.

"I didn't bring all these people here," Fidrych insisted, in what is becoming his familiar refrain. Yet he has a chart on his locker listing the attendance at each home game he's pitched.

New York leads runner-up Cleveland by eight games, but Detroit is just two games behind the Indians and a half game back of Baltimore.

"He did a super job," Yankee manager Billy Martin said of Fidrych. "I thought we'd get to him early because we hit him hard in the early innings.

"But he got stronger as the game went on."

Fidrych's appeal includes his unusual habits on the mound. Among them: getting on his knees and smoothing the dirt on the mound with his hands, doing deep knee bends before his windup, waving his hand at the plate to line up pitches and talking to the ball.

TOP BERTH AT STAKE IN TONIGHT'S BATTLE

First place in the Western Canada Major Junior Lacrosse League will be at stake when Victoria McDonalds play host to Burnaby Cablevision at Esquimalt Sports Centre tonight at 8.

The Bakers hold first place by a single point over Cablevision and the reason is simple. They have lost two and tied one of four games with Cablevision this season. The tie game was one that caused a fuss when the Cablevision squad last played here.

The visitors refused to take the floor for overtime with the score tied at 11-11 at the end of regulation time. McDonalds appealed at the time, but the appeal surprisingly was rejected. Since then overtime has been ruled mandatory.

In other meetings between the two teams this year, Cablevision scored 12-9 and 21-20 decisions on the mainland, McDonalds winning the season opener 10-6.

Tanner Upsets Connors In Straight-Set Victory

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Roscoe Tanner beat favored Jimmy Connors 6-4, 6-2, 8-6 in the quarter-finals of the men's singles today at the Wimbledon tennis championships.

Wimbledon already had been assured of something new this year when Arthur Ashe, last year's men's singles champion, was defeated by Vitas Gerulaitis of New York last week.

Now there will be a complete new set of champions. Billie Jean King did not return to defend her women's singles title while the defending men's doubles titleholders Gerulaitis and Sandy Mayer of the United States were defeated by Ross Case and Geoff Masters of Australia in the quarter-finals Monday. The Australians won 3-6, 4-6, 9-8, 6-3, 6-1. Kazuko Sawamatsu of Japan did not return to defend the women's doubles title she won with Ann Kiyomura.

Margaret Court of Australia also did not return. She and Marty Riessen of the United States won the mixed doubles title in 1975.

In women's quarter-final results Monday, Virginia Wade of Britain defeated Kerry Reid of Australia 6-4, 6-2. Evonne Goolagong of Australia defeated Rosemary Casals of the United States 7-5, 6-3, Mrtina Navratilova of Czechoslovakia outlasted Sue Barker of Britain 6-3, 3-6, 7-5, and Chris Evert beat Oga Morozova of the Soviet Union 6-3, 6-0.

Connors, the firm favorite this year, was champion in 1974 and lost his title in last year's final to Arthur Ashe.

With Ashe already out of the tournament, the way looked wide open for Connors to regain the title. He had breezed through the first four rounds this year without dropping a single set.

But the seventh-seeded Tanner, famous for his 140-mile-an-hour-plus serve, showed today he has all the other shots in his armory as well.

Money Problems Hit Hockey Reds

PROVIDENCE (AP) — The owner of Rhode Island Reds has asked the American Hockey League to suspend the team's franchise for next season because of financial problems.

Owner George Sage told a news conference Monday the Reds had suffered a 40-percent drop in attendance over the last three season, skyrocketing expenses and a lack of adequate financial aid from the National Hockey League. The Reds lost $300,000 last season.

Chance for Double

The Stuffy McGinnis Major Men's Softball league has upheld a Juan de Fuca protest and the Jim Moody-coached juniors club gets a chance to score a double victory at Central Park tonight.

Juan de Fuca Builders protested a decision in a recent 2-2 tie with Ingraham Hotel.

In the disputed game, Juan de Fuca was batting in the top of the seventh with a man on third, one out, and the score tied 2-2. Builders' Mike Penner drew a walk but was called out by the plate umpire "for failing to go directly to first base." Penner, after drawing ball four, tossed his bat into the direction of the Ingraham batters' cage. He retrieved it when he realized this mistake in order to hand it to the Juan de Fuca bat boy.

The league's protest committee overruled the umpire and a replay has been ordered from the protested point . . . with runners on third and first (Penner) and only one out.

The replay will start at 6:15 and will be followed by a regularly-scheduled game between Juan de Fuca and Ingraham.

Royal Oak Sporting Goods and Sooke Merchants suffered setbacks at the hands of lower-ranked clubs in league play Monday.

League-leading Royal Oak dropped a 5-3 decision to Mike's Sport Shop at Central Park and runner-up Sooke was edged 3-2 by Molsons at Sooke Athletic Park.

In Sidney Men's Association play, Sidney Hotel blanked KOA 6-0 behind the four-hit pitching of Wayne Cripps and a home run by Ray Hummell at Sanscha Park.

At Hyacinth Park, GSV Combos bounced MacDonalds Furniture Seniors 11-2 and Stockers North Americans tripped London Boxing Club 6-2 in Victoria Senior Women's League play.

In Sunday games, Stockers tripped Hygrade Radio 5-3 and Combos mauled Seaboard Construction, 20-1.

Kamloops Added To Junior Loop

KELOWNA (CP) — The British Columbia Junior Hockey League added a new team to its lineup and did away with the position of president at its annual meeting on the weekend.

Representatives of the league's seven teams voted unanimously to give Kamloops a franchise for the 1976-77 season.

The team will be a direct farm club of the Kamloops Chiefs of the Western Canada Hockey League. Chiefs' owners Ernie Rempel and Andy Berna will also control the new BCJHL team.

The league now has teams in Penticton, Kelowna, Merritt, Vernon, Kamloops, Nanaimo, Langley and Maple Ridge. Chilliwack dropped out earlier this year for financial reasons.

In doing away with the paid position of president, the league elected Ernie McLean, owner of the Maple Ridge Blazers, to the new, non-paid position of chairman of the board.

McLean is also coach and owner of the New Westminster Bruins of the WCHL. Former BCJHL president Bryan Couling resigned last season to become general manager of Penticton Vees.

Wally MacCrimmon, of Kelowna, and Ron Livingston, of Langley, were elected vice-chairmen.

Late-Models Return

Late-model stock car racing makes its return to Western Speedway Wednesday night when about 16 cars from as far down the west coast as California battle each other in the Winston-Victoria 100.

The NASCAR Grand National Western field, which bypassed Victoria last year, rolls into town after Sunday's Evergreen 150 at Monroe, Wash., which was won by Chuck Bown of Portland in a 1975 Chevelle.

NASCAR competitors must Drive 1973 models or newer and two Victoria drivers qualify — Roy Smith in Dick Midgley's '76 Chevelle and Terry Forsyth in the Garden City Auto '73 Chevelle.

Forsyth didn't drive at Monroe but Smith finished fifth after running into clutch problems and a blown radiator hose during a pit stop in the closing laps.

Forsyth must add 400 pounds to his car to meet the minimum NASCAR weight qualifications of 3,800 pounds.

Bown will be on hand along with Ron Eaton of Tacoma in the '75 Chevelle he drove here in open competition 10 days ago. He's dropped a bigger engine in it for NASCAR events. Another Portland driver returning for the race is Ernie Stierly.

About 10 of the drivers will be from California. Among them are Ron Gautsche of Truckee, Chuck Wahl of Burbank and Gary Johnson of Modesto, who was third Sunday at Everbreen.

Gates open at 6 p.m. with time trial at 7 and racing at 8, beginning with a five-lap trophy dash, a pair of 10-lap heat races and the 100-lap main event.

When Good Word Comes, So Will Rating Change

Here's a notice for Cedar Hill's bulletin board:

The British Columbia Golf Association is aware of the problems being created by the existing rating of 58.4, and is waiting only for the go-ahead from the Royal Canadian Association before making a change.

"The course rating procedure which now is in effect in Canada and the United States bases course ratings primarily on yardage," says BCGA president Jim Gibson of Vancouver.

"However, we do have the ability to rate courses with a plus or minus 1.5 based on the difficulty factor. To go beyond this factor, application has to be made to the Course Rating Committee of the RCGA for approval of a course rating that the BCGA considers realistic.

"In the case of Cedar Hill, we have applied to the RCGA because we appreciate that the rating based on yardage and a 1.5 factor does not adequately cover the difficulty factors at this golf course.

"When approval has been received, the course rating will be changed."

Rating, of course, helps determine handicaps and many district golfers feel Cedar Hill's 58.4 is unrealistic.

★ ★ ★

Gibson also commented on recent Victoria-based criticism of players who do not show or fail to complete rounds in tournaments.

"It has been the practice of the BCGA, over the past five years that I am aware of, that any competitor who does not show or fails to turn in a completed scorecard is automatically reprimanded by our association.

"Like you, we feel this is a serious breach of golf etiquette," said Gibson.

Since there wasn't "proper warning" served on amateurs who committed these offences in the recent Victoria City and B.C. tournaments, the BCGA feels it can't dish out suspensions this year.

The guilty players, however, "will be considered" when their entries show up for the Canadian Amateur at Colwood in August.

Finally, it must be mentioned, the BCGA does take stern action when it's necessary.

Two Vancouver-area golfers were handed two-year suspensions last week for falsifying their handicap cards.

SHORT CHIPS: Island Open champion Cec Ferguson, long associated with Gorge Vale, has put in an entry application at Uplands . . . The golf crowd, informed last spring that Al Zimmerman plans to return to live in the States, seems surprised to see the retired and former U.S. tour professional still around . . . Fact is, Al and Barbara won't give up their Sidney residence until September . . .

That "good practice" didn't help Gorge Vale pro Earl Davies and partner Grant Milliken in the Centennial Foursomes . . . Before heading for the Foursomes at Uplands, Davies invited Ed Brady for two quick holes of practice . . . Davies birdied the first hole and scored a hole-in-one on the second . . . "Time to quit," said Earl, and headed for his Uplands tee-off appointment . . . In the Foursomes? "Bloody awful," says Earl . . .

Another interesting hole-in-one development was recorded by Oak Bay's Brian Bradbury . . . Competing in last Tuesday's stag night competition, Bradbury took on 9 on 1 and then a 1 on 9 . . . It was his first ace and, they say, the party was great . . .

Also scoring aces in recent days were Eric Graham, on Glen Meadows' 15th; Ab Wells, on Oak Bay's 8th and Charlie Smith, on Oak Bay's 13th . . .

★ ★ ★

Pete Morretti of Royal Colwood shot a 72 for low gross honors in the Metchosin Open. Ernie Neal of Metchosin had a 73. R. Webber of Metchosin 74, Tom Hutton of Colwood 75 and John Gowan of Glen Meadows 76. Bruce Craigie of Metchosin won a three-way playoff with low net of 59. Darral Herschmiller and Ross Busby of Metchosin were second and third, also with 59s. Al Ulmer of Metchosin had 61 and Ralphe Adolphe of Metchosin, also a 61 . . .

★ ★ ★

Betty Stevenson won the Gorge Vale ladies' handicap championship which was played on two consecutive weekends. Shirley Lewis was runner-up and captured medallist honors with a net 75. Flight winners were: 2nd Flight, Alice Mitchell and Nita Moody; 3rd Flight, Gert Pumfrey, Clara Johnson; 4th Flight, Irene Ritchie, Norma Spandler; 5th Flight, Bea Lundgren, Margaret Fry; 6th Flight, Mary Wakelin, Sis Reid; 7th Flight, Helen Speight, Freda Gardner; 8th Flight, Sylvia Burnip, Jeon Bothwell.

JUDY SETS EARNINGS RECORD

CHAGRIN FALLS, Ohio (AP) — Judy Rankin rolled in a three-foot putt for a par on the 18th green Monday and a one-stroke victory in the $100,000 Babe Zaharias Invitational golf tounament and a new single season earnings record for the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour.

Rankin, whose $15,000 victory raised her season's total to $96,830, saw a three-stroke lead dissolve to one when she put her drive in a water hazard on the 17th hole and came away with a double-bogey six.

That left Jane Blalock and JoAnne Carner one stroke off the pace with Blalock already in the clubhouse and Carner going head-to-head with Rankin.

Rankin's money earnings break the single season record of $87,094 set by Carner in 1974. She now has won four tournaments in 15 tries this year, but had not won since April.

Sandra Palmer was fourth with a final day 73 and a total of 293, while Susie McAllister — who had a three-under 69 for the only under-par round Monday — tied with Chako Higuchi of Japan at 294.

Dollar Battle Is Brewing

TORONTO (CP) — The scramble for Toronto's summer sports dollar is turning into a promotional battle between two of Canada's three major breweries.

Next summer's box office matchup should shape up as a contest between Carling-O'Keefe Ltd. of Toronto (football and soccer) and Labatt Breweries of Canada Ltd. of London, Ont. (baseball).

Carling-O'Keefe entered into the battle in earnest Monday with the acquisition of a 40-per-cent interest in Toronto Argonauts, the wealthiest franchise in the Canadian Football League.

Only last week the same company announced it was negotiating to buy Toronto Metros-Croatia of the North American Soccer League.

Labatt Breweries owns a 45-per-cent share of the Toronto team which begins play in baseball's American League in the 1977 season. The brewery led the drive for that franchise.

There was an indication Monday that the breweries may be hedging against the possibility of government restrictions on beer advertising with their entry into the sports field.

Wilmat Tennyson, president and chief executive officer of Carling-O'Keefe, said:

"I suspect from the type of thing we have heard said in Ottawa over the recent year for two years . . . there is going to be some form of restriction on beer advertising in the mass media.

'And maybe ultimately a complete withdrawal, voluntarily or otherwise, of beer advertising judging by the expressions of what we hear from people in Ottawa."

Tennyson said the "involvement with Argos is part of a plan on the part of Carling-O'Keefe to become more closely involved with some aspects of professional sport in Canada."

Tennyson said the brewery paid Argo owner Bill Hodgson $2 million for the 40 per cent interest. However, Hodgson said control of the club will remain in his hands.

Hodgson, who bought the Argos from John Bassett in partnership with Sam, Bill and Hymie Belzberg of Vancouver for $3.5 million in March, 1974, bought out the Belzbergs' 50 per cent "some weeks ago."

"I really had no plans at the time I purchased 100 per cent of the club," Hodgson said. "But after Carling O'Keefe approached me things happened very quickly.

"It took only three weeks. I am very pleased to see a corporation of this size come into football."

For many years Canada's third major brewery, Molson Breweries of Canada Ltd., controlled Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League.

All three breweries are involved extensively in amateur sport and auto racing. Tennyson indicated his company will continue its interest in the O'Keefe Sports Foundation, which has funded a number of fulltime amateur coaching positions in recent years.

Her time cut more than five seconds off the previous world record mark of 4:01.4, held by her compatriot, Ludmila Bragina.

Riders Bounce Esks

OTTAWA (CP) — Three Ottawa Rough Rider quarterbacks blended passing and running for a 40-25 win over the defending Grey Cup champion Edmonton Eskimos in a Canadian Football league exhibition game Monday night.

The Eskimos went ahead 15-0 in the first quarter but then Tom Clements, Canadian Bill Robinson and Condredge Holloway brought the Riders alive.

Clements set up an 11-yard touchdown run by fullback Art Green and 18-yard scamper by rookie John Palazeti. Robinson engineered 45- and 40-yard field goals by Gerry Organ and a two-yard touchdown run by fullback Paul Carreathers.

Holloway hit Moody Jackson on a 47-yard pass-and-run play and sent halfback Scott Crawford over from the one-yard line. Organ converted four of the touchdowns and added a Holloway tried a two-point conversion that failed.

Edmonton-flanker John Konihowski caught a 31-yard touchdown pass from veteran quarterback Tom Wilkinson; halfback Keith Barnette scored on an eight-yard run and running-back Billy Ray Nash cracked over from the two-yard line.

Dave Cutler converted all three touchdowns and added a 36-yard field goal as well as a single on a missed field goal attempt.

Ottawa had a total offence of 399 yards — 286 through the air and 128 on the ground — on 22 first downs.

Edmonton's total offence was 325 yards — 250 passing and 75 rushing. They had 23 first downs.

Farmers Climb

Farmer Construction and Kubicek's Home Service, tailenders in the four-team Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League, are rapidly catching up to the leaders.

Farmers continued the surge by upsetting first-place Greaves Movers 12-10 Monday night at Lambrick Park.

The win left Farmers in a tie with Kubiceks, two and one-half games behind Greaves and one and one-half behind runner-up Gorge Hotel.

Two big innings — a six-run third and a five-run fourth — helped Farmers.

Lee Doney bashed out a three-run homer to spark the fourth inning effort. Roy Moretti hit a two-run homer in the second frame to give Greaves a 2-1 lead.

Shoe Money Boosted

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — At least half of the 600 athletes who competed at the U.S. Olympic track and field trials could have come to Eugene barefoot and would have gone home with at least two pairs of shoes if not a car load.

The Great Shoe Scandal which rocked the track world at the 1968 Olympics in Mexico City, and which heated up again four years ago, continuesd to brew, although at a lower temperature.

It was estimated that the top under-the-table payment to an Olympic Athlete in 1968 was $25,000 but estimates are that more than four times that amount is being offered to a small group of select competitors this year.

The main combatants for the last decade have been two large companies from West Germany. Recently, two Japanese firms and even one from Scandinavia have made inroads.

The aim of each is the same: to get world record holders to wear their products and thus make them attractive to today's youngsters who idolize the stars.

Neither of the major two companies makes a great deal of money from the sale of its track equipment. Both estimate that track and field related sales represent only five per cent of their total revenue.

But the world wide recognition that a particular track star competes in a particular brand is undeniably beneficial in the sale of such other equipment as tennis shoes and racquets, jogging shoes and even sports wear and luggage.

If the payments are continuing, however, they are being handled much more carefully than in 1968, when the two major firms admitted openly paying athletes to compete with cash and cheques.

"It makes me bitter to see what they are doing," said one representative. "We give these guys shoes and equipment for four years and then, when it means the most, someone comes along with an attache case full of money.

But representatives from all of the firms here acknowledge that such payments are difficult to prove because they are being handled much more covertly and carefully.

Still, it has become a sort of game among track fans to guess which shoe a particular athlete will be wearing tomorrow.

One athlete recently signed a contract which called for him to compete in only one company's equipment and he wound up earning not only a salary but also was guaranteed bonus money based on his performances.

"I guess we brought about 3000 pairs of shoes here," said the representative of one of the West German firms as he packed up to leave. He had about 500 pairs of shoes left.

One company claims it is not making direct payments to athletes, saying it is simply "Sponsoring the best track clubs in the U.S., like the Pacific Coast Club, The Maccabi Club, the Philadelphia Pioneers and the D.C. Striders.

"We subsidize them with a small donation, for them to operate, and what they do with the money I do not know. Some of the subsidies are as low as $1,000."

Still, both firms' representatives are irate over what they call "The raiding of our athletes." Apparently, whether or not contracts are written or verbal, some athletes have been long committed to one company only to show up suddenly in another's equipment.

"A partial purpose of our job is to get athletes to realize they will run better in our products," said one representative.

"But we have heard of some pretty unbelieveable offers from our competitors and it's pretty disturbing when one of our guys shows up wearing their stuff."

Anti-Noose Margin Now Begins to Waver

By IAIN HUNTER

OTTAWA — With signs that some MPs who voted for abolition of the death penalty last week are wavering in the face of pressure from their ridings, Tory retentionists agreed Monday not to filibuster the capital punishment bill into August.

After their amendments to restore the death penalty for treason, terrorism and first degree murder were ruled out of order in committee, the retentionists agreed to resume debate on the issue today on the condition that the Commons not sit Friday.

John Reynolds (PC — Burnaby-Richmond-Delta) said this will give MPs a four-day weekend to discuss the capital punishment issue with their constituents.

The proposal received the unanimous consent of the Commons.

He and other retentionists — mostly Conservatives — are hoping that MPs who aproved the abolition bill inprinciple last week by a margin of only eight votes will be persuaded by their constituents to defeat the bill on final vote.

Last week Reynolds stated that rententionsists were prepared to filibuster the bill into August if necessary to give enough time for Canadians to put pressure on wavering abolitionists to change their stand.

But on Monday night the retentionists noted that public opinion seems to be working on the borderline abolitionists already, and they suggested the final vote on the controversial issue could come late next week.

Bruce Halliday (PC—Oxford) who voted for abolition in principle last week told reporters he is being "jailed" by retentionists in his riding and said the pressure is being put on others in his area to change their votes.

He appealed to Solicitor-General Warren Allmand during the committee hearing Monday to ensure that second time murderers and those committing treason and hijacking be given true life sentences without parole and that greater compensation be given to victims of crime.

He stated that these suggestions must be accepted by the government to satisfy his constituents or he would feel free to vote against the bill on final reading because it would be "an incomplete bill."

Allmand, however, rejected his demands although privately he has been reported as favoring retention of capital punishment for treason if this would ensure passage of the abolition bill.

Former Conservative prime minister John Diefenbaker, an abolitionist, voted against the bill last week on the grounds that it didn't allow the death penalty for treason.

Former Liberal revenue minister Robert Stanbury warned Allmand that even abolitionists are concerned that the bill might allow dangerous criminals to be released to early, and proposed that cabinet decide when to parole those serving life sentences.

Committee chairman Mark MacGuigan ruled out of order amendments proposed by Reynolds and Allan Lawrence (PC — Northumberland-Durham) calling for rentention of the death penalty for murder of the monarch or members of the Royal Family, warlike acts against Canada, first degree murder or murder for a second time on the grounds that they violated the principle of abolition approved by MPs by last week's vote.

Only one amendment, moved by Stu Leggatt (NDP —New Westminster), was approved to leave it up to a judge and jury to decide whether convicted murderers should be paroled before the 25-year term is up.

Leggatt proposed that a judge and jury, instead of three judges as proposed in the bill, should decide whether a person sentenced to life should be paroled before 25 years.

He argued that this would give the community, into which the criminal would be released, some say in the matter.

Allmand replied that this had been considered but that the government decided to add two community representatives to the Parole Board when it hears applications for parole from convicted murderers.

"I'm all for ensuring the public that these dangerous people will not be released lightly or frivolously — that they will be kept in custody so long as they are dangerous," he declared.

Lawrence, arguing for retention of capital punishment, said that he was an abolitionist until as attorney-general of Ontario in 1971 he had to deal with the Kingston Penitentiary riots in which several inmates were murdered by other inmates. Other prisoners and guards are afraid of the more vicious type of inmate who has killed two or three times, he said.

"God help the diddlers, child molesters and sex offenders in our institutions — they are going to be killed by other prisoners," he warned.

The money spent to keep in prison those "who have voided any right they had to life" could be better spent to compensating victims of crime and their survivors, he argued.

Deaf Aids Studied

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission is ready to decide whether it will interfere in Bell Canada's plans to install new devices in telephones for the deaf, Jim Fleming, parliamentary secretary to the communications minister said Monday.

Fleming told the Commons the commission has received both sides of the story from Bell and a group representing deaf people, but it is a "matter not easily resolved." He was replying to John Rodriguez (NDP—Nickel Belt) who said the new devices are inadequate for the needs of the deaf — about 10 per cent of the Canadian population — one-third of them old-age pensioners.

Defy MPs Over Time, Hayden Urges Senate

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator Salter Hayden challenged his colleagues in the Liberal-dominated Senate on Monday to defy the government and pass a series of amendments to controversial foreign advertising tax legislation.

Senator Hayden (L—Ontario), chairman of the influential Senate banking committee, said Senator Ray Perrault, government leader in the Senate, and Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner were counting on a tame Liberal majority to reject the amendments and pass the legislation intact.

He said he was irritated by their attitude and by Faulkner's statements to reporters that the government has the Senate vote to reject the banking committee's recommendations.

"If he thinks he can come in here and do that, well fine," Senator Hayden said, setting the tone for tough final debate on the legislation.

The bill, first introduced in the Commons by Faulkner 14 months ago, would deny Canadian advertisters in Time, Reader's Digest and other foreign-owned magazines and on U.S. border television stations the right to claim 100 per cent income tax deductions for advertising costs.

Time has already suspended operations of its Canadian news section because of the bill which would effectively double the cost of advertising.

To qualify as Canadian for tax purposes, magazines would have to be 75 per cent Canadian-owned, free of foreign editorial control and at least 80 per cent different in editorial content from comparable foreign publications.

After six weeks of public hearings, the banking committee, which was almost unanimously opposed to the bill, called for amendments to delay its implementation.

Ship Plan Rapped

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition MPs who backed the government's proposed maritime code when the issue was debated in the Commons last winter backtracked Monday, arguing this is not the proper time to establish a Canadian-flag merchant fleet.

As the maritime bill debate began, Government House Leader Mitchell Sharp said he had no intention of pressing the bill to completion unless it was the wish of all parties.

He added he did not intend to call the bill again before the summer recess.

The proposed code would replace the 40-year-old Canada Shipping Act and legislation dealing with coastal trade.

Money on Wheels—That's the Skateboard Craze

It's a Boom—Color It Loud Green

New York Times

NEW YORK — Somewhere in the U.S. — maybe in a small garage, maybe in a large factory — someone who understands the American marketplace is building the ultimate skateboard.

It will come equipped with radial tires, a rear heel defogger, a citizen band radio and air-conditioning. It will sell for $1,000, local tax and dealer prep not included. And there will be lines around the block to buy it.

Because people are getting rich on skateboards.

Manufacturers are getting rich. Retailers are getting rich. Promoters are getting rich. Skateboorders are getting rich. "Everybody's getting rich," said a skateboard buyer for a major metropolitan retailer.

The operative word is "boom." The color of the money is loud green.

"I'll tell you, I was pessimistic at first," said Carl Fink, the skateboard buyer for the Herman's Sporting Goods chain, which has 52 outlets across the U.S. "We knew the kids in Californio were buying skateboards two years ago, but we didn't start stocking them until last November because the West Coast is always 10 or 11 months ahead of the East Coast on these things.

"Anyway, we got them in, and all of a sudden they started flying. I mean flying. We tan areas on one day. We sold 600 boards in eight metropolitan areason one day. We sold 48 boards in our Rego Park (N.Y.) store in one hour. You should've seen it, it was really something."

Herman's sells skateboards that retail at $16.99 to $59.99, and between Jan. 1 and June 1 this year, the chain sold 20,440 skateboards.

The Morsan chain sells five styles of skateboards, ranging in price from $17.99 to $37.99. And though it doesn't sell the volume that Herman's does, that isn't because it couldn't.

"Without advertising," said Norman Arnonowitz, who buys skateboards for Morsan's 11 metropolitan outlets, "we can sell 150 to 200 boards a week. If I was really going after it, I could do 400 in a weekend. I'll tell you, when I brought in the $35 model, I was afraid I was going to eat them. I thought they'd sit on the shelf and collect dust. But we're selling the expensive ones better than the cheaper ones."

The skateboard craze trickled northward and finally peaked in Victoria about a month or two ago, although sales are still steady, a spot survey indicated this week.

As in the U.S., the more expensive models are being snapped up. "The better ones went first. We couldn't get enough," the Bay sports department said.

The Bay carries models ranging from $23 to $50. During the peak, the store was selling 12 to 14 a day and during the first day of a current sale on skateboards, about 22 were sold.

During a recent week-long sale at Eaton's, the store turned over between 400 and 500. Prices go up to $50, and the $41.98 model is one of the most popular, although prices do go as low as $24.98.

Woodward's sporting goods reports sales are excellent — "levelling off now, but steady," a spokesman said.

The last time the skateboarding craze hit the U.S. was 1965, when California dreaming was becoming a reality. Moondoggie was hanging-in all over la Jolla, trying to impress Gidget, and Jan and Dean were singing backgrounds.

Skateboards were a $9.99-top item in the toy stores, a cheap thrill. Now, they're selling as sporting goods, ranging from $7.99 for an import to $125 for a fiber glass special.

According to Dave Dash, the advertising director of Skateboarder, a California-based magazine devoted to skateboarding that claims a circulation of 125,000 for each of its six issues a year, the projected nationwide sales for skateboards in 1976 is $300 million, representing 15 million boards.

In 1965, during the last boom, the nation-wide figure was $25 million. In 1970, when almost no one on the East Coast was buying boards, the figure was $1 million.

"By Christmas time," Dash predicted, after consulting his sales figure print-outs, "It's going to be going crazy in Middle America."

IN 'LOVE' with his skateboard, 14-year-old Raymond Olson reaches for a lob playing tennis in New Westminster. It's the latest skateboard craze in the neighborhood.

Problems Still In the Sahara

RABAT (Reuter) — Although Morocco and Mauritania have successfully changed the political map of Africa by carving up the former Spanish Sahara between them, they still face problems and scattered hit-and-run violence.

The main source of hostility to the arrangement, the first time a colony has been absorbed by two neighboring states, comes from Algeria where President Houari Boumedienne is demanding that the people of the area be allowed to exercise their right to self-determination.

The Algerian-backed Polisario Front, a Saharan nationalist movement, wants independence for the area's nomad population. It has armed guerrillas who say they will fight to the death to liberate the area now occupied by more than 20,000 Moroccan troops.

Moroccan officials say they virtually control the 103,000-square-mile territory. But late in April the Polisario managed to lob mortar bombs into the territorial capital, El Ariun, damaging and wounding six people.

They also hit at the phosphate deposits at Bou Craa, said to be among the world's largest and richest.

The Polisario sabotaged the conveyor belt that takes the phosphate from Bou Craa to the coast, putting the mining operation out of action for the second time this year. Repairs will take months.

But military sources say the guerrilla threat is likely to diminish considerably as summer approaches. The searing heat in the desolate wastes, where all water supplies are held by the Moroccans, will make offensive operations extremely difficult.

Meanwhile Morocco's King Hassan has launched a diplomatic campaign, sending eight emissaries to capitals in Africa, Asia and Europe as a way of convincing governments that Morocco and Mauritania are the legal owners of the territory.

The envoys were instructed to stress that the takeover is irreversible, that the 74,000 inhabitants accept the situation and that the new owners will never renounce their sovereignty nor make territorial concessions.

A main aim of the diplomatic offensive is to thwart Algerian attempts to obtain official recognition of the "Sahara Arab Democratic Republic" (SADR) proclaimed by the Polisario in February.

The SADR has been recognized so far by nine African states and North Korea. Algeria is the only Arab state to give it official backing.

Officials here say Algeria is trying to use the SADR to set up a puppet regime that would give Algeria access to the Atlantic in West Africa.

Officials here consider President Boumedienne has committed himself so deeply he cannot back down without losing face. They cannot see him changing, so they tend to lay more store by an eventual change of regime in Algeria.

The consensus is that war is unlikely. There may be a few more shooting incidents, but the battle will be finally won on the diplomatic field, as the world comes to accept that another colony has disappeared from the African map.

BLAST WELDS METAL AT 2,200 M.P.H.

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain's New Scientist magazine has reported a new method of welding two metals devised by the Russians: with an explosion.

A special chamber for the job was developed by the institute of hydrodynamics in the Siberian town of Akademgorodok. It now is used in a factory making foundry equipment.

A 6.5-pound explosive charge slams the two plates to be welded together at a speed of 2,200 m.p.h, resulting in a fusion of the two metals.

The Russians say the chamber gives high-quality welds and is useful for bonding different metals such as copper and steel. Other possible applications are in welding electric cables and even in cutting metals.

Arena, Pool Voted Out

An ice arena at John Dean Park and separate swimming pool at Parkland school recommended by the recreation commission were turned down by both north Saanich and Sidney councils Monday.

While the two councils were holding their regular meetings, the Saanich school board was voting to give its okay to study of the possibilities for council-school board co-operation on just such a pool. The study was to be done by a liaison committee of the two councils and school board.

The same motion to "explore the possibility" was approved by North Saanich but rejected by Sidney.

Both councils, however, voted to include an ice surface and pool in one recreation centre on the John Dean Park site as recommended by their joint steering committee.

Estimated cost of the all-in-one centre is $1.85 million and a referendum is scheduled for both Sidney and North Saanich Sept. 11.

Choice of the steering committee's recommendation over that of the recreation commission came less than a week after the commission complained of poor communication with the steering committee and of interference in the commission's planning of the centre.

The steering committee is made up of representatives from each council, while the recreation commission, a holdover from the days of tri-municipal arrangements with Central Saanich, has recreation-minded representatives from both councils, the school board and community-at-large.

Saanich Okays Funds For Indian Curriculum

Transfer of $16,800 to the Saanich Indian school board for development of an Indian curriculum was approved Monday by trustees of Saanich school board.

Superintendent Eric Lewis, in his recommendation to the trustees, noted that the provincial education department had approved such programs, that the B.C. public school system did not suit native people as shown by the high dropout and absentee rate, and that Indians did not accept a superimposed course of study which they have not been involved in developing.

Lewis emphasized that the local curriculum was developed by the native people themselves, that the material would be used at the Tsartlip school and that some courses could be possibly used in other schools in the district.

Marie Cooper, who has led the drive for an Indian curriculum since 1970, and Janet Boston, administrator and curriculum co-ordinator respectively for the Saannich Indian school district, appeared before the trustees to answer questions.

After the approval, Miss Cooper said the Tsartlip school, recently destroyed by fire, would probably be in operation by the fall with portable classroom units. The school has students from pre-kindergarten to Grade 7.

She said the Indian program would be a total immersion concept with such things as the arts, communications, cultural studies, environment studies and physical development taught.

She stressed that the curriculum was developed with direct involvement of the Indian community.

"There is no positive identity for (Indian) youngsters right now," Miss Cooper said, "They have a very negative self image."

Indian chiildren were particularly sensitive around the Grade 8 level, she added.

INMATE ELECTED

William Head convict Wilf Redlac has been elected a member at large of the Greater Victoria Community Action Group.

He is the first convict to be elected to the organization, which assists welfare recipients, the handicapped and prisoners.

Redlac does community service work when out on pass from the prison.

The Community Action Group re-elected Victoria lawyer David Lisson as president.

Other officers re-elected are vice-president Dorothy Gislason, second vice-president Janet Woodford, treasurer W. H. Schuring, secretary Gloria Harris and public relations director Sharon MacBain.

Members at large, beside Redlac, are Ald. Bill Tindall, John Fass, Sara Armstrong, Larry Ryan, Al Boyce and Linda Streeter.

★ ROLLBACK BID VETOED

A bid to take wage increases awarded Saanich teachers last December to the Anti-Inflation Board for possible rollbacks met with defeat Monday night.

Trustee Jack Armstrong brought the subject up at Saanich school board's meeting in Sidney but his motion was defeated by a 4-2 margin.

Saanich teachers, part of the southern Vancouver Island zonal bargaining unit, won a 11.3 per cent salary increase.

Armstrong said he recalled that trustees were told earlier of the probability of a rollback and said it was the duty of trustees to clarify the situation to the electors. He said it would be a dereliction of duty to submit the settlement to the AIB.

Trustee Rubymay Parrott led the dissenters, saying she didn't agree with "rear-view mirror legislation."

She said it would be impossible to try to collect any money and that the loss of goodwill and administrative costs would be more than the monetary returns.

Armstrong's only supporter when the vote was taken was trustee Harry Tobin, who seconded the motion.

'LOST' WITNESS FOUND IN COURT

Defence lawyer Douglas Christie startled Victoria provincial court Monday by stating that a witness Crown prosecutor Nicholas Lang had been looking for was present in the courtroom.

The unusual turn of events came during an appearance by William Christie before Judge William Ostler. Christie is facing charges of assault causing bodily harm and unlawful confinement.

Douglas Christie, representing William Christie (no relative), was applying to have the charges quashed, charging the prosecution with abuse of the due process of law.

Lang explained that the week's delay in fixing a trial date was caused by a witness who failed to appear and was subsequently summonsed on a warrant issued by Ostler.

Police had been unable to locate the witness, Patricia Darlene Knelson of 623 Raynor, Lang said.

Christie, who seemed slightly surprised himself, then told the court that it had come to his attention she was sitting in the courtroom.

"She's right here?" Ostler asked incredulously.

Shortly after Ostler set today for the start of Christie's trial, sheriffs' officers escorted Mrs. Knelson from the courtroom and the warrant was served her.

In the afternoon, Mrs. Knelson appeared before Ostler on a charge of failure to appear and Lang asked for her retention in custody until today's trial.

When asked by Ostler why she didn't appear last Monday when she was supposed to, Mrs. Knelson replied that she didn't realize what date the summons was for.

"You say you didn't read the summons" Ostler replied. "Now that seems very unlikely, doesn't it?"

Ostler said that although he found her reason unbelievable he would release her on her own recognizance to return to court today.

Farm Credit For 5,700 In B.C.

With deadline Wednesday, more than 5,700 B.C. farmers have used the provincial agricultural credit program this year.

In operation for the last two years, the program lets more young people get into farming by providing guarantees for their loans or enabling them to obtain lower loan interest rates.

Ian Carne, provincial agricultural department official, said in Victoria last week young farmers must invest $250,000 to $700,000 for land and equipment these days — then come up with operating money while repaying their loans.

And though the farmers' watchdog body, the B.C. Federation of Agriculture finds small fault with the program, members generally support it wholeheartedly.

Most farmers use the program to get reimbursement of some interest they paid on agricultural loans.

Others — especially young farmers with no "track records" of good credit — use it to guarantee loans.

And others have used it for incentive programs such as one for livestock breeding in the Peace River region just after the start of the scheme.

Agriculture federation head Jack Wessel pointed out several aspects of the scheme he felt could be improved.

"It's a bit indiscriminate in providing benefits," he said, adding that young people should get even more of a break than they now do with the credit program.

This Pair's Paper Work Goes Right on the Wall

Helen Whittemore (under sink) and Barbara Gale (on ladder)

New York Times

WASHINGTON — When she tells people about her job, Barbara Gale has to watch her words. "Otherwise," she says, "people think, you're passing bad cheques." Barbara Gale is a paperhanger.

For the past six years, she and her partner, Helen Whittemore, the wife of E. Reed Whittemore, a poet and educator, have donned overalls, gathered their ladders, brushes, buckets and rolls of wallpapers, and headed for the job.

Getting into the business was almost an accident. The two families were neighbors some 20 years ago in Northfield, Minn., where both husbands were affiliated with Carleton College — Robert Gale as vice-president of public relations and development, Reed Whittemore as chairman of the English department. They all met again in Washington in the early 1960s, when Whittemore was appointed poet in residence at the Library of Congress and Gale joined the Peace Corps as director of recruiting.

The two women started a catering service, but they had growing families (there are seven children in all) and "we were always driving around with all those deviled eggs, just at the moment we should have been home feeding our own families," they explained. One day they told a client, "If you're going to do all this entertaining, you've got to do something about your powder room — it's awful."

That was their first commission.

"We really are better than men," explained Barbara Gale. "We work more carefully."

A former Powers model and a graduate of Julliard, she has worked as a chorus girl, as a sales clerk, dipped chocolates, worked for the Peace Corps and written foreign policy letters for Sen. Hubert Humphrey. But, she says, there has been only one other job she enjoyed as much as her present one, and that was as understudy to Mary Martin in "Annie Get Your Gun."

In hanging paper, there is "instant satisfaction," she says.

"It's a whole slice of life you don't see any other place," said Mrs. Whittemore whose friends, she says, are into ceramics, yoga, black history or getting advanced degrees.

Both women spent the early years of their marriages as adjuncts to their husbands. Helen Whittemore married while in college and the years quickly filled up with dinner parties, children, nursery schools and the Camp Fire Girls.

Their children are occasionally employed as apprentice help. Recently they were all hard at work in the empty house of a family who had left town for a month, when they suddenly realized the place was surrounded by police with drawn guns, flashing lights, and a paddy wagon. A well meaning neighbor, suspecting a burglary, reported to the police that two cars loaded with hippies had drawn up. Mrs. Gale recalled with a giggle, "My son, Neddy, called out from his perch on the ladder —no, officer, we're just ripping off the paper!"

What is the fascination of paper hanging?

"It's a kind of therapy," explains Mrs. Gale. "When we first started, I told Helen it was just like kindergarten — playing with mud pies and water up to here!"

Preventing Blindness

By Dr. William J. Welch

Vigorous treatment of diabetes by diet and medication has made normal life possible for tens of thousands of adult men and women who otherwise would have known only progressive illness and premature death.

But one of the most perplexing aspects of even well-treated diabetes is that disorders of the blood vessels and particularly of the small vessels of the eyes may develop in spite of the most rigorous control of the blood-sugar levels.

That trouble begins with the deterioration of small blood vessels in the retina, the highly specialized lining inside the eyeball. Such vessels tend to bleed. Bleeding results in diabetic retinopathy, one of the nation's leading causes of blindness.

There are at least 53,000 people in the United States and Canada who are blind because of diabetic retinopathy. It is estimated that another 300,000 men and women who are diabetic have some degree of this progressive condition and are threatened with losing their sight.

For some six years, a treatment of diabetic retinopathy called "photo-coagulation" has been under study. Now, according to the National Eye Institute, there is substantial hope that the sight of those threatened by diabetic retinopathy may be saved.

Photo-coagulation is accomplished by directing a beam of intense light through the lens of the eye. When properly focused on the damage-causing blood vessels, it seals them off and prevents them from bleeding.

The source of the powerful coagulating light is a green argon laser or a white xenon arc light. Its highly concentrated beam can be pinpointed in such a way as to burn off the tiny blood vessels without damaging the surrounding retinal tissue.

Several years ago, in 16 centres across the United States, the National Eye Institute initiated a carefully controlled study of some 1,700 patients with moderately severe retinopathy. Each patient was treated with photo-coagulation, but only in one eye. The other served as a control for comparison as well as a safeguard in the event that the treatment should prove hazardous.

Now, after a two-year follow-up, it has been reported in the American Journal of Ophthalmology that blindness has appeared in 129 untreated eyes but only in 56 of the treated eyes.

With such a promising record thus far, the photo-coagulation technique will now be applied to untreated eyes that show a worsening of vision (except in those where blindness has already taken place.)

It is not possible to reverse blindness with photo-coagulation, but it is clear that in many cases, blindness can be prevented before the vessel changes have progressed to the point of seriously interfering with vision.

Building Blocks Right Under Your Feet

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS®

If you're on the lookout for inexpensive building supplies, the answer to your problems may be right under your nose — or to be more precise, under your feet. Plain old garden-variety dirt — mixed with a touch of cement — makes a great construction medium.

Substantial 4x6x12-inch construction bricks can be built from ordinary earth with a manually-operated machine called the CINVA Ram. "Mother" reader C. D. Folsome reports that the soil-cement bricks work fine, even in the cold, damp eastern edge of Washington State where he lives.

The main limitation of compacted earth — vulnerability to attack by moisture — can be overcome through the addition of cement to the raw soil as a "stabilizing agent." Folsom offers proof: two years after building his barn and chickenhouse out of the soil-cement blocks, he says the structures have endured one reasonably severe winter and, in general, have lived up to his highest expectations.

Soil-cement not only has excellent insulative qualities but is strong, durable, fireproof, easy to work with and extremely low in cost. Folsom's blocks set him back three cents each ... and they wouldn't have cost that much if he hadn't been forced to buy clay and a sand to add to the silty, local soil!

The CINVA Ram can be purchased for about $250 from Bellows Internationsl, 200 W. Exchange St., Akron, Ohio, 44309. It comes complete with wooden inserts for making floor tiles, semi-hollow channels and grille blocks.

(In case you're wondering, CINVA is an acronym for the Inter-American Housing and Planning Centre of Bogota, Colombia; Ram is taken from the name of Paul Ramirez, the Chilean engineer who invented this brickmaking device in the mid-50s.)

The machine consists of a box or mold which is filled with damp soil-cement, and a lever-actuated piston that compresses the earth-binder mix. Once the mold has been loaded with the proper amount of material, the machine's operator then forces its long handle down with a pressure of 700 to 100 pounds (exerting, in turn, 40,000 pounds of pressure on the soil that is being compressed). The brick formed by this procedure is then ejected, set in a cool place and left to cure for up to three weeks.

Though not technically difficult, making construction blocks with a CINVA Ram is what is known as a "labor intensive" operation. Four adults — working in an organized assembly line with the aid of a mechanical cement mixer — can produce only about 50 of the 4x6x12-inch bricks in an hour. Since a couple of thousand are needed for even a small house, you can see why few people attempt this construction technique alone!

But even though the bricks may take some time and effort to make, the benefits are still there — economy, strength, durability and good insulation.

The basic brickmaking process can be broken down into five steps: (1) analysis of the soil, (2) sifting of the earth, (3) preparation of the mix, (4) manufacture of the blocks and (5) curing of the bricks.

You must know the composition of the soil you intend to use before you can determine the amount of cement — and-or missing "native" materials — you'll have to add to the final "mix." Somewhat sandy earth seems to make the best CINVA Ram blocks; the optimum soil for the bricks is made up of approximately 5 per cent sand and only 25 per cent silt and clay. A good deal of variation from this ideal is permissible, though.

Whatever the consistency, the soil must be dried and seived (to remove large lumps, stones, leaves and other impurities) before it can be properly mixed with cement and compressed into blocks.

The amount of cement you use will depend upon the composition of the earth you have at hand. Sandy loams may require as little as 4.75 per cent cement, while soil with a great deal of clay may need a maximum of 15.4 per cent. More cement than that is not recommended.

All dry ingredients are combined thoroughly, and water is then added a little at a time until the proper consistency is reached. The soil-cement is then loaded into the CINVA Ram, the lever is pulled down, and presto! — soil cement blocks.

The bricks must then be cured or aged, preferably on a flat, non-absorbent surface in a shady environment. The slower they dry, the stronger they'll be, so it's best to keep the bricks covered with plastic for four days or so and moisten them from time to time. Three weeks after leaving the mold, the blocks can be used in construction.

The same building techniques used with concrete blocks can be employed with bricks of pressed earth. Folsom decided to seal his blocks and thus waterproof them for good because of the wet Washington weather. He simply applied a clear acrylic masonry sealer to the finished walls.

Poetic Licence For Torrid Verse?

DEAR ABBY: I would like to know if I am living with a talented poet or an incurable woman-chaser.

My husband and I are in our late middle years, and I thought him loyal until I found in his desk several hundred love poems he admits he composed himself. Some are as bland as unsalted popcorn, but most are more like enchiladas!

These impassioned paeans of pleading praise and ecstasy contain the names of more than a dozen women — Ginny, Julie, Linda, Jackie, Edna, Florence, etc. All, he insists, are casual encounters about whom he has fantasized.

Is is possible that there is no foundation whatsoever for all these torrid "love affairs" he so vividly described in his poems? Just how much "poetic license" should one be permitted? — POET'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Poets have vivid imaginations, but the only way you can tell whether your husband is fantasizing or philandering is to catch him in the latter. Meanwhile, renew his license and forget it.

DEAR ABBY: I wonder if you or your readers can come up with an answer to my problem.

I've just moved into a new home. My next-door neighbor is very likeable, and I enjoy her company. However, I visit her home only upon invitation.

Not so with her. She is at my door at least twice a day. Each day her visits become longer. Friday she stayed from 12 noon until 3 p.m. Today (Monday) she was here from noon until 3 p.m. again. Today I scrubbed the kitchen floor and turned on the dishwasher. Conversation was difficult, but it didn't slow her down.

In another town, six years ago, I had the same problem. When I suggested to my neighbor that perhaps she was visiting me too much, she left in a huff and never spoke to me again. I felt a loss as she, too, was a nice person whom I enjoyed as a friend.

I don't want to lose my new neighbor's friendship in the same way, but I don't want to resort to leaving my home daily just to avoid her. How can I discourage her in a way that will retain the friendship on a less frequent basis? — NEEDS SUGGESTIONS.

DEAR NEEDS: Take your choice. You can keep quiet and let your neighbor barge in whenever she pleases for as long as she likes. Or you can tell her in a nice way that you need more time to yourself, so you'd appreciate it if she would please call first.

If she rejects your friendship because of your frankness, it's preferable to being trapped in your own home or having to leave just to avoid her. Who needs friends like that?

DEAR ABBY: Why did you have to write that column saying Indian men were better lovers than white men?

There are enough white women throwing themselves at my half-Mohawk husband without giving them added incentive.

Please tell those love-hungry white women that if they want an Indian lover, they should have married one, as I did — MARY.

FRANCE TRYING TO SPEED UP ADOPTION LAWS

PARIS (Reuter) — Every year in France 40,000 couples want to adopt a child, but only 2,000 succeed in penetrating the bureaucratic red tape.

The adoption law was changed in 1966 to speed up the process, but the reform, while widely praised, failed to work effectively.

So pioneering Health Minister Simone Veil has produced another draft law to simplify the administrative tangles.

The main thrust of her reform is to give judges greater leeway in deciding when a child has been abandoned and qualified for adoption. Also, if passed by parliament, the bill will make it infinitely easier for parents who already have natural children of their own to adopt other children.

At present, a child's parents can torpedo the adoption process by writing a handful of letters a year to state authorities looking after the unwanted child.

The law often takes this as sufficient proof that they are still concerned about the child's future. So, as the child grows up under state care, its chances of being successfully adopted slowly evaporate.

A government communique said that under the new draft law, "the intention expressed by the parents, but not carried out, to take care of a child's upbringing and education will no longer suffice to reject an adoption application." This is to ensure justice is less restrictive in its interpretation.

Government statistics show there are about 40,000 couples seeking adopted children. But many are discouraged by delays that average at least two years.

So only 7,000 couples put in applications. Of these 2,000, or about 29 per cent, succeed.

Foster parents will be the big beneficiaries of the draft law's other main reform — the stipulation that parents with their own children can also adopt.

This was prompted by a series of highly publicized "tug-of-love" cases in which foster parents were obliged by law to hand over children belatedly claimed by their natural parents.

At present, the only way a foster parent can gain legal control of a child is by special dispensation from President Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

They must supply a dossier on their income and life style. Then a social worker visits their home, interviews friends, neighbors and employers, and generally judges their competence.

If you have ever played with the idea of having an aquarium but hesitated to buy one because you didn't know how to care for tropical fish, here is the answer to your problem.

The beautifully illustrated 36-page booklet "Beginner's Aquarium Digest" explains how an aquarium should be set up.

It contains much helpful advice. For instance, don't buy fish and plants at the same time as the aquarium and equipment. Fish and plants should be put into the water after it has cleared and attained the right temperature.

Most beginners tend to overcrowd their aquarium. Healthy fish need plenty of room. Because the oxygen they breathe collects at the water surface, the surface area of the water determines the number of fish you can safely keep in an aquarium. The booklet tells you how much surface area different types of fish require.

You will learn how to care for your aquarium. The booklet contains a care and feeding table for 150 of the most popular tropical fish. Colorful pictures of 30 kinds of tropical fish which are of special interest for beginning aquarists are also included.

Telephone Monitor Keeps Those Hearts Beating

SEATTLE (UPI) — A telephone monitoring system is being used by several Seattle heart patients to make sure their cardiac pacemakers are not going to let them down. If their devices fail, some patients might die.

The "dial-a-pulse" system was set up three years ago at Harborview Medical Centre in Seattle by Dr. Thomas Preston, associate professor of medicine at the University of Washington.

The patients, who live in Seattle, wear the battery-operated pulse generators implanted in the skin of their chests. The pacemaker produces a five-volt signal, which travels along a conducting wire to the heart, creating a pulse rate of 70 beats to the minute.

The devices are geared to a three-year life expectancy but that is increased by use of the telephone check system.

The patients borrow, at no cost from the university, a unit that is attached to their wrists. This unit monitors their heartbeats and transforms the signal into impulses. A telephone receiver is plugged into the unit and the impulse is sent via the telephone to the hospital once a week where it is recorded for analysis.

The telephone check is used by some patients, who are dependent upon the pacemaker as a matter of life or death. In some cases they might die within a matter of hours if their pacemakers fail. Others are not dependent, but would become ill if their pacemakers broke down.

Pacemakers are used primarily to prevent what is know as heart block. This is a condition in which the heart beats only 30 to 35 times a minute and is subject to stopping, Preston explained.

One-third of the heart-block patients would die within a month without their pacemakers. They might die suddenly if the device failed without warning.

"Seventy per cent of all pacemaker failures are due to the death of the batteries," said Preston.

Battery failure is noticed by a change in the rate of heartbeat signals and this gives the patient approximately four weeks in which to get new ones.

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

Dear Lynn and Joel:

I have an anthurium plant that I brought back from Hawaii three years ago. It had one bloom and I had it transplanted into a larger pot by a nurseryman. Since then it has never bloomed and has died back. I put it in more light and new plants appeared, but now they have turned yellow and are dying. I feed it vitamins, but no results. Hope you can help me.—G.J.

Dear G.J.:

About the only suggestion we can give — and we're not being sarcastic — is that if you really want to grow Anthuriums you'd best move to Hawaii or into a greenhouse. In Hawaii, this beautiful, red-spathed plant grows wild all over the place, but it really needs that subtropical climate to thrive.

We personally don't know anyone who has had much luck with Anthuriums due to the lack of humidity, although we do have friends in Florida who report success.

Perhaps with the aid of a humidifier, constant spraying, grouping with other Anthuriums, planting in a mixture containing sphagnum moss and the use of grow lights, you can make your Anthurium bloom indoors. But don't count on it. Try instead merely to maintain the foliage; good, indirect light and frequent watering should do the trick, and if you get a bloom, consider the Gods of the Big Island have decided to smile on you. Aloha.

Search On for Brother

OWEN SOUND, Ont. (CP) — For the last two years, 86-year-old Harry Groves and two close friends have been conducting a methodical search to locate Groves' brother Bill, whom he has not seen for 60 years.

Groves and Mr. and Mrs. Ross Kell have travelled to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta to search for Bill.

They visited Royal Canadian Legion, provincial government and old-age pension offices and checked telephone books.

Groves and the Kells thought they had finally succeeded when they found a Mr. Groves in Winnipeg whose father, named William, had come from England as a boy, just as the missing brother had done. However, they knew they had the wrong person when Groves of Winnipeg responded to their questions by saying, "If you find the old reprobate, let me know."

"We knew it wasn't Mr. Groves' brother then," Mrs. Kell said. "He certainly didn't fit that description and besides, there were other things that didn't check."

If Grove's brother has not been located by September, the searchers will travel to England in search of him.

"I'm not going to be around for much longer," Groves said. "I just want to see my brother before then. It would make me so happy."

Recalling their last meeting, he said, "We must have been in our early 20s when he came up to Owen Sound to ask me to go west with him."

Despite the temptation of buying 160 acres of land for $10, he decided he would be better off to stay here.

Groves, who has three brothers, was closest to Bill, who is one year younger.

Both were sent to an orphanage in England because their mother, who was separated from her husband, could not afford to raise four children.

"One day we were asked to speak right up if any of us wanted to go to Canada," he said. At that time, Canadian farmers needing help were sent boys from British orphanages.

Remembering the ocean voyage, Groves said he and Bill were pretty sick but became close during the eight-day crossing.

"When we got to Canada, he was sent to one farmer and I to another," he said. "That was that, until he showed up and wanted me to go west with him."

Groves met the Kells three years ago and told them about his brother. Since then, they have participated full-time in the search.

"Of course it's worth the effort," Mrs. Kell said. "Harry is practically a part of the family."

Although he has missed his brother all these years, Groves said he has had a good life, filled with work, travel and friends.

If he does find Bill, Groves said he already knows what his first question will be.

"Where the dickens have you been all these years?"

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In all competitive endeavors, on any given day an inferior player or team can beat a superior player or team. The same holds true at the bridge table.

When today's deal was played, East and West were two of the world's best players. They were opposed by two players who were good, but were really not in the same class as East and West. But our South declarer played brilliantly, and the result was that East-West took a beating owing to circumstances beyond their control.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	1 ♡	1 ♠	2 ♡
2 ♠	Pass	5 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♡.

East's overcall was not what one would call a thing of beauty. The only justification for his bid was that his side was not vulnerable, while the opponents were. When North raised freely to two spades, South assumed that North had more than a minimum opening bid. His leap to five spades asked North to bid the slam if the latter could prevent East-West from cashing two tricks in their suit, hearts. North, despite the minimum nature of his hand, elected to bid the slam.

With any opening lead except a heart, declarer would have had no problem, since by leading a club towards dummy's king he would make a winner out of that card; and on it he would discard his losing heart. But West got off to a heart lead, dummy's ace taking the trick.

It would appear that the success of South's contract depended on the six outstanding diamonds being divided 3-3 (which they weren't), so that on dummy's fourth diamond South could discard his remaining heart. But South found an alternative line of play. He cashed seven trump tricks, leaving himself with the heart nine, the A-7-6 of diamonds, and the club deuce.

West's last five cards were the 10-8-4-2 of diamonds and the club ace (West had to discard the queen of hearts on the preceding trump trick, to guard his diamonds). Dummy had the K-Q-5 of diamonds, and the K-10 of clubs. The lead of the club deuce now made a cashable winner out of the club king, for declarer's 12th trick.

MANILA — An unidentified Philippine admirer has sent Prince Charles of England a $30,000, 28-foot sea-going cruiser as a gift. Eddie Marcelo, the boat's builder said Monday. Marcelo said the boat, aboard the S. S. Weser Broker in a crate addressed to HRH Prince Charles, Prince of Wales, Buckingham Palace, London, England, should arrive in Southampton, England, by the end of July.

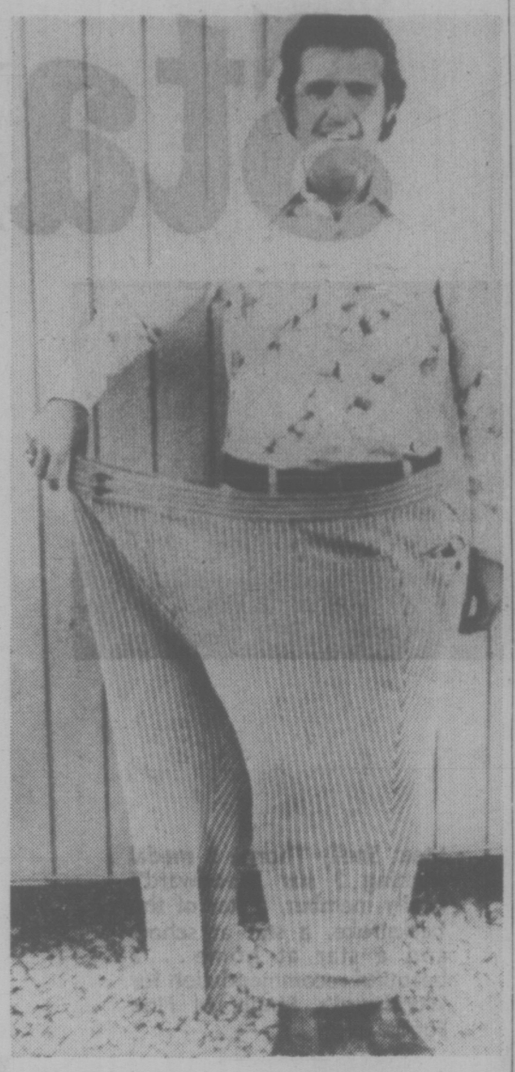
EDMONTON — A disbarred Edmonton lawyer was given a one-year suspended sentence Monday after pleading guilty to the theft of more than $7,107 from trust funds. Mr. Justice Cameron Steer imposed sentence after Barry Ryan pleaded guilty to three charges of theft. Court was told Ryan was disbarred in 1974 and during that year made complete restitution. Mr. Justice Steer was told that during the time the thefts occurred, Ryan had been under "financial stress."

DETROIT — A young Good Humor man is in a bad humor. It was not enough that two thieves took his money, but witnesses to the crime then joined in and stole his ice cream. Police said the salesman, Harold Page, 18, was stopped by a young man asking to buy ice cream. Instead of buying, the man pulled a pistol and took $100 from Page's pockets. Then a second man approached and took $70 from a money bag in Page's truck. To top it off, about five persons who had been watching the incident ransacked the truck, making off with 15 to 20 cartons of ice cream.

COLUMBUS, Ga. — Amsey Sheffield didn't have a ladder and couldn't carry his love down one anyway, but he and Nannie Gurley eloped and got married anyway. "We were in love," said the new Mrs. Sheffield, a 73-year-old widow, showing off her marriage licence. She announced that she and her 94-year-old husband soon will move from the nursing home where they live to her house in Columbus. "The doctor didn't want me to stay alone," she said. "Now I've got someone to be with me 24 hours a day."

SEATTLE — Gas station owner John Banda did a brisk business, but the cash wasn't going into the till. It went into a bag held by a robber hidden inside the office. Banda told police a man came to the office and asked for directions. "I have a gun," the intruder said and then positioned himself out of sight under a desk where he stayed while business boomed. "Thanks, sucker," the robber said before he left the station. Police said that the bandit fled after he hauled in $500.

NEW YORK — Karl Thomas is estimated to be more than 1,200 miles out to sea today and flying behind schedule on his mission to make the first transatlantic voyage in a balloon. The estimate was made by Thomas's ground crew, despite its not having heard from the 27-year-old balloonist for 24 hours. The crew said Thomas was probably conserving power by limiting transmissions.



DUTIFUL DIETER is Randy Delahoussaye, used-car dealer from the heart of Louisiana's Cajun country who found that his 400-pound weight was hurting business as well as his health. He slimmed down to 214 and found that both improved. He isn't the only thing that shrunk, he says — his clothes budget has, as well.

ROLLING STONE

MIDNIGHT AT TOAD HALL: They call themselves the Bezbo Sisters. So far, they've kept a low profile, displaying their Thirties-style, three-part harmonies in such out-of-the-way spots as the River City in Fairfax and Toad Hall in Mendocino (both north of San Francisco). They're not the kind of places you'd normally find one of the Sisters — Maria Muldaur.

Sister Mary Ann Price, one of Dan Hicks' ex-Hot Licks, said that she, Ellen Kearney for the first time on Mul- and Muldaur sang together for the first time on Muldaur's last album, on an old Boswell Sisters number called We Just Couldn't Say Goodbye.

The ladies couldn't, and when Maria moved up to the Bay Area, they decided to put together a show, including original material, some Gershwin and some swing.

"It was something to have fun with at first," Price said. "But it sounds so good that it would be really nice to get it recorded. Maria might be up for it. I think she wants to get some fresh air into her career, although she wants to remain primarily a soloist."

But for the time being, the Bezbo Sisters are inactive.

Muldaur — unavailable for comment — is rounding up a band for her July solo tour. Toad Hall won't be on the agenda.

WE VISITED with Frank Zappa at his Beverly Hilton Hotel suite the other day.

Frank recently produced the soon-to-be-released Grand Funk LP, but it was another creation of his — a videotape that he calls Token of His Extreme — that we were mainly curious about.

"Anything that people know about me comes from a poster of me sitting on a toilet, or something that they read someplace," Frank said before screening the tape.

A Token of His Extreme is not crappy.

It features about an hour's worth of live footage of the 1974 Mothers of Invention, which Zappa has dressed up with color tinting and double and triple exposures. Interspersed are some amazingly intricate, clay figure animation sequences that you may have seen on the Midnight Special tribute to Zappa.

Frank said that Token has been shown on European TV but that he hasn't been able to sell it here yet. Zappa's explanation: "It's too good."

QUOTE TO REMEMBER: Says Daryl Dragon (of the Captain and Tennile) about the tremendous burden" he and Toni face in influencing young fans:

"The Beatles misused that responsibility and turned a whole generation onto drugs. We're going to be careful how we use our new fame."

THE LAST TIME The Tubes played their hometown of Phoenix — in 1972 — they were the Beans, young and poor. They're still young, but not so poor anymore (Young and Rich, their new album, is bulleted in the Top Fifty), and when they returned on the last lap of a national tour recently, they got a big welcome.

Lured by the Tubes song, Proud to Be an American, and, no doubt, the publicity dividends, the local Army recruitment centre sent a delegation to meet the group at the airport.

Later, the Tubes and Army exchanged plaques and quips at a downtown gathering. Tube Fee Waybill: "Although we were never in the Army, I want you to know we're behind you all the way, pushing you in front."

That night the group played to 5,000 at the Civic Plaza, including parents and friends.

Asked what mom and pop thought of his onstage antics, Fee laughed:

"They love it except they think I'm killing myself. My dad's been telling me to learn how to play the guitar so I can just stand there."

Accused Denies Sexual Advances

Laboratory technician Kenneth Roy Black, 30, of 2264 Marlene, denied in a county court trial Monday that he made sexual advances to a 15-year-old patient last September.

Referring to evidence given earlier by the complainant, defence counsel Don Farquhar asked, "Is that true?"

"No," Black replied.

"Did you do anything of a sexual nature with Miss ... Sept. 3, 1975?"

"No."

A court order prohibits the publication or broadcast of any testimony by the complainant, who alleges indecent assault on two consecutive days.

Regarding the second count, Sept. 4, 1975, alleged to have occurred at Eric Martin Institute, Black said he was in another place at the time the offence is said to have taken place.

Much of the evidence heard subsequent to Black's testimony was by fellow workers at Royal Jubilee Hospital in establishing an alibi for the time of the alleged offence Sept. 4.

Judge E. J. C. Stewart denied a defence motion last week that the Crown had failed to establish jurisdiction showing that the alleged offences occurred in the city of Victoria, county of Victoria.

He was sataisfied that two witnesses for the Crown did say the medical institutions referred to are in the city and county of Victoria, and ordered that the trial proceed.

Black said he was married, the father of two small children and had been employed as an electroencephalography technician for eight years at Jubilee.

He also is required to make encephalogram tests at the adjoining Eric Martin Institute.

He told the court he saw the accused the morning of Sept. 3 about 10.10 a.m. when he took down information told to him by the patient about a history of headaches. He then attached a headband to which wires are connected for the purpose of recording brain waves by an electroencephalograph machine or EEG.

At the end of the test, which took place while the complainant was lying on a bed in a cubicle with Black looking from outside the cubicle tending the machine, he said he walked the patient back to her mother who had waited in the hall. He said he spoke to the mother.

The next time he saw the complainant was at the preliminary hearing into charges brought against him, Black said.

On the following day from lunch time until closing time at 4:30 he engaged in various activities associated with the diagnostic services department where he is employed, court was told.

At 12:50 p.m. he went to EMI to test a patient and finished there at 2, when he returned to his lab at Jubilee. Documentary evidence supported the appointment at EMI.

Black said he worked in his office-lab until about 3:10 p.m. when he returned to EMI to test another patient. Arriving there, he said no record could be found by EMI staff relating to a test, so he returned to Jubilee about 3.

One of the office staff, Lorna O'Brian, said she remembered Black being in the office about 3 p.m. because he put some EEG tracings on a desk near her and said he was going for coffee.

Witness Gregory Martell, a Jubilee Hospital orderly who has known the accused several years, said he met Black for coffee and they spent about 25 minutes together discussing a convention they were both to attend the following day.

Mrs. O'Brien said she also went for coffee, about 3:15, and when shhe returned about 3:30, Black had already got back.

From then until 4:30 the staff of six remained there, or were in and out of the office for periods of time, the witness said.

She said when she heard about two weeks later that Black was facing charges she volunteered to help the accused and discussed circumstances of the day in question with other members of the staff because she was concerned about him.

Patricia Cutler recalled being in the diagnostic office about 3:20 p.m. Sept. 4 and that Black was also there, and was there when she returned from coffee about 10 to 4.

From then until 4:30 she and the accused worked together at a desk, she said.

The witness described the accused as "a fine family man" she had known eight or 10 years while employed at Jubilee.

She remembered the day because it was the birthday of a member of the staff for whom the others had bought a humorous greeting card and each had signed. It was given to the person about 4 p.m. when Black and the others were all there, she said.

Carol Coleman, an EEG technician from the same department as Black, recalled Sept. 3, 1975, because it was Black's first working day after holidays.

She entered the lab where he was working that morning and saw he was at the EEG recording machine, watching it and observing his patient, a young girl, through a glass panel of the cubicle where she lay on a bed.

The lab offered little privacy from the desk and locker area of the same room, she noted.

Under cross-examination by Crown counsel Richard Law, Black said a test of the kind done on the complainant would require more than a half-hour, probably 45 minutes to an hour. He said one reason the patient is observed is to note movements such as opening and closing the eyes, moving an arm or leg, which are noted on the paper record made by the EEG machine. Major movements would show up in the recording itself, he said.

Doris Davenport, the woman whose birthday it was, said Black was in the office about 3:30 Sept. 4, 1975, when she went for coffee and was there with some of the other staff when she returned about 3:45. He is "a very fine person to work with," she said.

The trial continues.

Crime Laws Discussed

Canada's new crime laws, which have been given second reading by the House of Commons, will be discussed by a panel at 7 p.m. Thursday on Cable Channel 10.

John Post of the legal education branch of Camosun College will discuss the effect of the proposed law changes on the community while William Head prison official Dewey Callaghan and inmate Wilf Redlac discuss how the changes will affect life inside the prison.

FALSE AD FINE $300

Oakcrest Park Estates Ltd. of Victoria has been fined $300 after pleading guilty to misleading advertising, according to a report released by the federal department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs.

The report says the company advertised tins of half-a-pound of tuna but investigation showed there was only 6.5 ounces and not eight ounces in the tin.

It was one of 20 cases of misleading advertising dealt with in the report and the only one from the Victoria area.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Judge William Ostler noted that trust is the whole basis for issuing prison passes, before he handed down a four-month prison sentence Monday in Victoria provincial court to a William Head escaper.

Bernard Joseph Kell, 34, pleaded guilty to a charge of being unlawfully at large and was given the additional jail term.

Prosecutor Nicholas Lang told the court Kell was serving a six-year sentence for robbery, assault and being unlawfully at large, and was due for release in September of 1977 when he went missing on Saturday.

He was arrested shortly after 6 a.m. Monday by Saanich police while he was attempting to hitchhike to Nanaimo on the Trans-Canada Highway.

Lang said Kell was discovered missing from a meeting for alcoholics in Victoria while on a pass from William Head.

Lang commented that he had heard proper treatment facilities were lacking in federal institutions but when prisoners did get a chance to use facilities they didn't take advantage of them.

Ostler agreed with Lang and added his remark about trust.

★ ★ ★

A Vancouver youth who recently moved to Victoria pleaded guilty to contributing to juvenile delinquency, specifically with having sex with a 14-year-old girl in Vancouver.

Edwin Sean Turone, 20, who gave his address as a Victoria hotel, was remanded to July 19 while a presentence report is prepared.

Ostler released Turone on his own recognizance in the sum of $500 because he told the judge he was to begin a construction job Monday.

A Vancouver charge dated April 17 was resworn in Victoria so that it could be dealt with here, Lang said.

★ ★ ★

Ronald Richard Larsen, 30, of Nanaimo was remanded to Wednesday on charges of importing and trafficking in marijuana.

Larsen was granted the adjournment after telling Ostler he was having trouble obtaining counsel.

★ ★ ★

In traffic court, Ian Lake, 30, of 781 Fairview, was sentenced to 14 days in jail for impaired driving and fined $250 for refusing to take a breath-analysis test.

Court was told Victoria city police arrested Lake after observing him going around a traffic island at Government and Yates Feb. 24.

Byron William Turcotte, 20, of 114 Menzies was given a 14-day intermittent jail term for impaired driving June 14.

Court was told Turcotte was first observed by Victoria city police on Government and Wharf and a phase ensued, ending on Menzies in James Bay.

★ ★ ★

Bail was refused by Ostler for New Westminster resident Robert Randall Schindelka, 26, on a charge of trafficking in heroin April 16 in Esquimalt. Defence lawyer entered a trial choice of county court judge for Schindelka and the preliminary hearing was set for July 7.

GARDENING

Don't Despair, Still Time to Sow

By JACK BEASTALL

So far this season, germination and growth of early vegetables seems to be below normal in some gardens and the owners are not happy. But don't despair, for vegetable seed may still be sown.

Some of the home gardeners I have been talking to are amazed at this fact. Many seem to feel that sowing time is past and there is nothing that can be done now.

In rows where the germination has been poor there is nothing to prevent sowing more seed in the vacant spots. This is no different to the succession sowings we normally make.

Admittedly, succession sowing is something unknown in many parts of Canada, but it is commonly used here on the West Coast.

For those not familiar with this practice,it is the sowing of small amounts of each vegetable every 10 to 20 days according to type.

This system gives a smoll steady supply over the entire growing season instead of a large quantity of which half is wasted, followed by a period of short supply.

Not only is it an ideal way of supplying the needs of a small family, it is also the means of circumventing periods of adverse weather, or low temperatures, during our unpredicatble spring months.

Should one sowing be almost a failure, the sowing made ten days later is often a complete success. In this way the loss is minimal.

Due to unforseen circumstances some gardeners have not been free to do any outside work until now. If it is any consolation, they will not be far behind many who have worked since April and still have little to show.

Sowings made now are likely to go ahead rapidly without any set-backs.

Another common practice here is to sow a complete vegetable garden around July 15 and harvest good crops before the growing season ends.

Complete means everything excepting the long season crops. Any vegetable which will mature in 75 days or less can be used for this sowing. Full details will be given in this column as the date approaches.

Even gardeners who have moved to a new location will be able to prepare a piece of ground and take advantage of this summer sowing date.

POLE BEANS: early sowing seems to have failed in some gardens because of low night temperatures, but a sowing made now with weather more suited to this crop should come along well.

Should you be sowing pole beans this week it would be wise to use a been teepee rather than sowing in rows.

A bean teepee is made from six or eight 6 ft. poles (or stakes) set in a circle and tied together at the top. This makes a wind resistant support that does not collapse just as the the first pickings are ready.

Put the teepee in place first, then sow two beans seeds at the base of each pole. Train the runners to the stakes, and nip out the growing tips as soon as they reach the top.

With a mid-week holiday and improving temperatures, we have a chance to start over again and still have some good vegetables before the season ends.

Liquor Sale Overhaul

Attorney-General Garde Gardom said today he hopes to have reviewed the entire liquor distribution system in B.C. within two months.

Gardom said he had hoped the review could have been completed by June. He said it would entail cabinet consideration of whether beer should be available in corner stores, advertising, enforcement, and whether it will be possible to sell spirits in beer parlors.

He said cabinet had been too busy to meet his target date for completion.

He was commenting on a statement by Vic Woodland general manager of the Liquor Administration Branch.

Woodland said he was apprehensive about following the example set by Quebec which is the only province in Canada that has corner-store distribution.

He said it would create enforcement problems and might lead to an increase in the number of underage drinkers.

There are 22 grocery stores in remote areas that have been designated agency stores, he said, but the LAB is slowing down the process of designating those outlets and no other hs have been issued licences in the last six or seven months.

Curent crieria for licensing the stores is that the government liquor store must be at least 30 miles away.

The committee was told the markup on locally produced wines is 66 per cent on cost and for foreign wines is 117 per cent.

Wine sales in the province netted $1.25 million in the market for locally produced wines and $600,000 for foreign imports, he said.

Asked if the LAB was considering providing draft beer for private use, Woodland said it wasn't likely.

He said it is an awkward product to sell because it has to be refrigerated constantly and "it's more sensitive than milk to a change in temperature."

Socred MLA Stephen Rogers (Vancouver-South) asked if there had been any decrease in the "soda pop" sparkling wines sold in the province. Woodland replied that sales are slipping a bit but because they have a moderately low alcohol content of seven per cent and are popular with young people, they will still be available.

MDs Lash Out at TV Violence

DALLAS (WP) — The American Medical Association is taking aim at TV violence, which its board of trustees has decided is bad for the mental health of U.S. children.

Sparked by an article in its journal ast year by Dr. Michael Mothenberg of the University of Washington, which urged doctors to protest "the national scandal" of violence on the tube, the AMA trustees have authorized the publication of a booklet telling parents what kind of programs are suitable for their children.

In addition, the trustees recommended that the AMA's House of Delegates, organized medicine's governing board, which is meeting here this week, encourage the nation's doctors to remind parents to be careful what programs they let their children watch.

This is the first time organized medicine has attacked violence on television, and some AMA officials predicted that the campaign will intensify during the year.

As an indication of the new interest in TV violence by the nation's doctors, the California delegation to the convention is sponsoring a resolution asking patients to boycott programs containing violence and the companies that sponsor them.

This resolution called TV violence "an environmental hazard" and said the AMA should declare it "a risk factor threatening the health and welfare of young Americans, indeed our future society."

Rothenberg's article said the average U.S. youngster will have seen 18,000 murders on television by the time he graduates from high school. Moreover, Rothenberg said, the standard TV cartoon for children under 10 features robbery, arson, bombing, forgery, smuggling, beating and torture at a rate of one a minute.

"There is an average of six times more violenc during one hour of children's television than three is in one hour of

All this adds up, he said, to adult television," said Rothenberg, a child psychiatrist. an increase in aggressive behavior among American children.

ABANDON FLU SHOTS —SABIN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Plans to vaccinate every American against a possible epidemic of swine flu are under criticism from several sources, and one leading U.S. scientist wants the program abandoned except for high risk persons.

Dr. Albert Sabin, one of the developers of the vaccines that virtually wiped out polio, told Congress Monday the $135 million mass immunization plan as originally conceived is "no longer possible."

He recommended that, except for high risk persons, the program be abandoned.

Sabin and Leslie Cheek, vice-president of the American Insurance Association, testified in hearings of a house health subcommittee examining the program.

"It is evident that the original plan for mass vaccination of every man, woman and child in the U.S.A. as a means of preventing a potential epidemic of swine influenza virus disease is no longer possible," Sabin testified.

He said the vaccine trials revealed that most persons over age 52 would be protected against the disease without vaccination, and that for every 1 million children receiving an effective dose, about 190,000 would become sick with such side effects as fever, headache, muscle pains and nausea about 24 hours after vaccination.

Dr. Theodore Cooper, assistant secretary for health, and Dr. Jonas Salk, developer of the first polio vaccine, disagreed and said swine flu vaccinations should be given.

Big Demand For Candu Reactors

OTTAWA (CP) — A private report to a United States agency says Canada's Candu nuclear reactor is a strong contender in the increasingly competitive market of developing countries.

The report says the reactor is attractive to lesser developed countries (LDCs) and that it is a good producer of plutonium — the stuff of nuclear explosions — which has impressed some countries.

However, it says the Atomic Energy Corp. of Canada Ltd. can handle only a few sales a year because of lack of money and domestic requirements.

The report entitled Report on LDC Nuclear Power Prospects 1975-1990 was written for the Energy Research and Development Administration division of International security affairs.

It was prepared by Richard Barber Associates Inc. earlier this year and has been mentioned in the Commons by New Democratic Party members objecting to the current government's willingness to sell reactors to developing countries.

Stuart Leggatt (NDP — New Westminster) suggested in the Commons last week that Canada maintain control of Candus built abroad and simply sell the power to the country involved. The suggestion was rejected.

The report deals with prospects of making sales to developing countries and notes that the market is becoming highly competitive because of the number of potential suppliers and the few countries which can afford the reactors.

The report says:

"Whether an LDC rationalizes its desire for plutonium on grounds of stockpiling fuel for breeders of the future, or using it for "peaceful explosion' purposes, or obtaining it to sustain real or imagined military threat postures, there is no denying that these 'advantages' convey a potential competitive edge to the Candu type."

"Conversely, some countries who desire to give no cause for offence to a neighbor might choose to avoid Candu in order to reduce apprehensions about its motives.

"There is no doubt, however, that LDCs are impressed by the fact that one of their own, India, detonated a nuclear device developed from a program based on natural uranium, heavy water technology."

Pension Fund Taxed?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Times says the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) has revoked the tax-exempt status of the $1.4-billion Central States Teamsters Union pension fund.

In Washington, spokesmen for the IRS said they were neither confirming nor denying such reports.

Teamsters national headquarters in Washington had no immediate comment.

The Times quotes an unnamed IRS official in Washington as saying the pension fund lost its tax-exempt status because of alleged mismanagement and questionable loans.

The decision might mean that millions of dollars in taxes could be levied against the $1.4-billion fund that has been used for controversial investments, including an estimated $200 million in loans to hotel-and-gambling operations in Las Vegas, the newspaper says.

However, The Times says the action will not become final until all appeals by trustees of the fund are completed.

The Times says the IRS action was not directly related to investigations into the fund by Congress or the departments of labor and justice.

Pension fund money has two tax aspects: contributions from employers on behalf of their workers can be deductible from company taxes, and the earnings on the pension fund's investments can be tax-exempt.

Winds fanned a blaze out of control near Red Bluff, Calif.

Sergeant Acquitted

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A court martial has acquitted S. Sgt. Harold Bronson, the first of three U.S. Marine Corps drill instructors charged in the fatal beating of 20-year-old Pte. Lynn McClure last December.

Five officers and three enlisted men deliberated for slightly more than three hours Monday before finding Bronson not guilty of four charges and specifications in the case.

McClure died March 13 of injuries received when he was knocked out Dec. 6 during a close-combat drill with pugil sticks — padded, 12-pound staffs used to simulate combat with bayonet-equipped rifles. McClure never regained consciousness.

Bronson was accused of involuntary manslaughter, assault, maltreatment of a recruit and violating an order to conduct close-combat drills only with supervisory officers present.

Bronson was the first of three marine drill sergeants to face a court-martial as a result of McClure's death. Sgt. Henry Aguilar, 23, another member of the motivation platoon, is to be tried July 6. The third man to be tried, S. Sgt. Henry Wallrath, was a non-commissioned officer in charge of the platoon.

Girl, 8, Stoned To Death

CLEVELAND (AP) — Three teen-agers were charged Monday in the weekend slaying of an 8-year-old girl who was battered to death with stones after she survived being thrown twice from a building.

Police said the incident began with an attempt to scare the girl, Karen Kollar, as punishment for telling David Zytowiecki that his 16-year-old wife, Susan, had skipped a probation appointment.

Dallas Stuckey, 19, and Guy Frehmeyer, 18, who lived with the Zytowieckis, were charged with aggravated murder.

Susan Zytowiecki was charged with delinquency by reason of aggravated murder and kidnapping. Her 21-year-old husband was charged with obstructing justice. Police said he had helped hide suspects in the case and planned to help them leave town.

Authorities said Karen was taken to an abandoned brewery Friday evening and left there tied and gagged.

Police said when they returned, her captors pushed her off the roof of the brewery twice and battered her about the head with rocks and bricks.

The body was found early Saturday and a telephone tip led to the arrests.

Cancer High For Blacks

WASHINGTON (WP) — Black men in Washington are killed by esophagus cancer at nearly 2¼ times the national rate for blacks and nearly six times the national white rate.

This startling mortality rate, derived from a massive county-by-county study of cancer deaths in the U.S. between 1950 and 1969 and reinforced by other studies, can be explained partially by excessive use of tobacco and alcohol which is thought to be associated with the urban poor.

CRASH KILLS DRIVER

A 23-year-old woman was killed early this morning when the car she was driving hit a power pole on Hillside just east of Grosvenor.

A Victoria police spokesman said Joy Marie Cullen was killed instantly in the crash which happened at 12:22 a.m. only a block away from her residence at 107-1414 Hillside.

The spokesman said Mrs. Cullen, the lone occupant in the car, was on her way to work at a telephone answering service. He said she leaves a three-year-old daughter who was in the care of a babysitter at the time.

It took police and firemen more than half-an hour to free the woman's body from the wreckage.

Building Shutdown . . . Gov't Sits Out

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

B.C.'s construction industry will be shut down at 4 p.m. Wednesday with the lockout of 40,000 union workers and the provincial government has no plans to intervene.

"We are going to let it happen. There's nothing else we can do at the moment," a high government source said today.

He said the government had failed to find a formula to bring all unions together in a joint bargaining council requested by the Construction Labor Relations Association, which represents the 850 companies in the dispute.

He said both the employers and the 21 unions had been dragging their feet on the question of joint bargaining until it was too late.

"It is very difficult to resolve a difficult question like this (joint bargaining) during the heat of battle."

The outlook is for a long lockout unless the parties to the dispute either reach an agreement or request the services of the Mediation Services Branch.

The government remained hopeful but not optimistic that an agreement could be reached before the deadline of 4 p.m. Wednesday when the lockout would take effect.

The companies are locking out the unions because of the selective strike by about 600 cement masons. The masons put up a picket line which closes any construction project they strike.

Labor Minister Allan Williams today continued to encourage both sides to return to the bargaining table.

Williams agreed with CLRA officials that it would be desirable for the unions to form a joint bargaining council but the question was more complicated than it appeared on the surface.

One problem was a few companies preferred to deal directly with a single union. On the other hand, some unions believed they could do better if they negotiated on their own.

Williams has received a report on the dispute from associate deputy minister Ken Smith but found no grounds for immediate action in the report.

The report stated that neither the companies nor the unions had urged the government to intervene.

The report also said that until there is a request for government help there was little the government could do except to watch events. The only continuing government action is to be available around-the-clock to provide mediation services if requested.

Labor Strife Hurting Recovery—Employers

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Employers Council of British Columbia said in its mid-year economic outlook released Monday that the province's reputation for unreliability because of labor disputes is severely hurting its economic recovery.

The council said B.C. will continue to lag behind the rest of Canada in the coming six months because of high costs, high taxes and a low level of consumer confidence.

The council called for a meeting of leaders from labor, management and government to develop proposals for improving labor relations.

"Until this is done," said the council, "increasing deterioration can be expected."

The outlook said that although recent legislation indicating a change from royalties to a profit tax has been welcomed by the mining industry, it will not immediately produce any investment that had not already been planned.

However, all potential mines which had been shelved are being re-examined and production start-ups might be announced before the end of the year.

The council also said the provincial forest industry is headed for a recovery over last year's labor-disrupted showing.

Tourism is expected to decline by at least 10 per cent, the council predicted, blaming the province's reputation for having "among the highest prices in North America."

. . . FAMILIES PULLING OUT

The provincial department of housing says the province experienced a new loss of 30 families in 1975, compared to a gain of 3,731 in 1974.

The department's annual report, tabled in the House Monday, says the drop is the first in British Columbia since 1958.

The report also says housing starts in B.C. increased by nine per cent with 34,152 starts compared with 31,420 the previous year.

The Vancouver area reported a decline of eight per cent in housing starts, dropping to 13,308 starts from 14,452. Greater Victoria had a 51 per cent increase, to 3,980 from 2,630 starts in 1974.

There was 145-per-cent increase in the number of newly-completed, unoccupied apartments and rowhouses in the Vancouver area in 1975. The number rose to 1,652 compared with 675 units in 1974.

In Greater Victoria there were 199 such units at the end of 1975, one less than the previous year.

Vancouver had 1,158 vacant single-detached houses and duplexes in November, 1975, 441 units less than the previous year.

Greater Victoria had 34 unoccupied new houses compared with 111 such units in November, 1974.

The report says the apartment vacancy rate showed no improvement, remaining at 0.1 per cent in both Vancouver and Greater Victoria.

Hijackers Will Trade 256 Hostages for 53

Times News Services

KAMPALA — Palestinian hijackers demanded today the release of 53 "freedom fighters" held in Israel, West Germany and three other countries as ransom for 256 hostages and an Air France jet airliner.

French Foreign Minister Jean Sauvagnargues immediately announced that his government would not give in to the demands in the hijacking that began Sunday over Greece.

The hijackers said the prisoners, most of whom have Arab names, must be brought to Uganda's Entebbe airport and the exchange completed before 5 a.m. Victoria time.

The broadcast listed 40 "Palestinians and those fighting for the Palestinian cause" held in Israel. They included Archbishop Hilarion Capudji, the Greek Catholic archbishop of Jerusalem who is serving a prison sentence for smuggling arms to Palestinian Arabs.

Six prisoners were listed in West Germany, five in Kenya, one in Switzerland and one in France.

Those in West Germany have German names.

Sauvagnargues did not indicate whether France was refusing to release the one French prisoner or was rejecting participation in the entire scheme as the airline's home government.

The hijackers did not say what they would do if their demands or deadline were not met.

They threatened Monday to

AIRPORT HEIST NETS $3.4M

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard launched a nationwide hunt today for a British official of a U.S. air courier company suspected of masterminding the theft of at least £2 million ($3.44 million) from a warehouse at Heathrow Airport.

The Yard refused to give any details. But informed sources said the wanted man was a security manager with Purolator Services Ltd., the courier company, who has not been seen since the theft Saturday from the British Airways warehouse.

A reward of £125,000 ($215,000) has been offered for recovery of the money, at least half of which was in U.S. currency.

Control Issue Still Up in Air

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The planes were back in the air today but the controversy over bilingual air communication that grounded them for nine days appeared far from being resolved.

Leaders of the Candian Air Traffic Association (CATCA), the Canadian Air Line Pilots Association (CALPA) and Transport Monister Otto Lang Monday announced that agreement had been reached on a special three-man inquiry to evaluate the safety of an expanded bilingual air communication in Quebec.

Prime Minister Trudeau, advised of the agreements during his flight home from a seven-nation summit meeting in Puerto Rico, termed them a victory for bilingualism in Canada — "as total a victory on paper as was needed."

CALPA president Ken Maley and CATCA president Jim Livingston announced they were satisfied with the inquiry's terms of reference which call for proof "beyond a reasonable doubt" that the program can be implemented safely. They agreed to return to normal air operations.

But hours after the agreement was announced, Jean Luc Patenaude, director of the 330-member Quebec wing of CATCA, announced in a telephone interview from Quebec City that none of the

Doyle Bail Given Back

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada ordered today that $50,000 bail, posted more than two years ago, be returned to millionaire industrialist John C. Doyle.

Doyle, the former Montrealer wanted on fraud charges in Newfoundland, is believed living in Panama.

The bail, $25,000 cash and $25,000 in two securities, was posted in December, 1973, when Doyle was charged in Newfoundland with defrauding Canadian Javelin Ltd. of $540,000.

The charges against Doyle were to have been heard Jan. 30, 1974, but the Crown asked for an adjournment to April 1 because Doyle's co-accused, former Newfoundland public servant Oliver Vardy, could not be found.

Doyle's lawyers consented to the delay, but on the condition that his passport be returned.

April 1, the case was adjourned for four months, again because Vardy still was missing, and Doyle's lawyers objected, saying St. John's Magistrate Clement Scott had no power to delay the case.

TABARLY WINNER IN SOLO RACE

NEWPORT, R.I. (Reuter) — Eric Tabarly of France won the 3,000-mile single-handed trans-Atlantic yacht race today from Plymouth, England, to Newport, a spokeswoman for the race organizers said.

Tabarly, who had maintained radio silence since the race started June 5, arrived suddenly in the 73-foot ketch Pen Duick VI early today, surprising everyone, the spokeswoman said.

His latest victory is yet another in a remarkable string of triumphs for Tabarly and his Pen Duick boats.

He won the 1964 race in his 44-foot ketch Pen Duick II. As a consequence, the late President Charles de Gaulle made him a chavalier of the Legion of Honor.

Four years later, he entered again with a 70-foot trimaran named Pen Duick IV but was forced to withdraw when it proved not to be seaworthy.

His former protege, Alain Colas, radioed Monday morning to say he was moving slowly in insufficient wind about 125 miles from the finish line. He was sailing the largest vessel ever entered in the single-handed race, the 236-foot schooner Club Mediterranee.

More Auditors to Check Gov't Welfare Illegalities?

The auditing staff for the department of human resources may soon be doubled to guard against illegal use of funds by people employed in provincial welfare offices, Human resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm, told the legislature Monday.

In response to a question from Conservative leader Scott Wallace, Vander Zalm said there are currently three auditors employed by the department to investigate possible welfare frauds and there are plans to hire another three.

Wallace asked if there is any evidence arising from an alleged misuse of funds in the New Westminster welfare office which would justify a review of all accounting procedures in the offices.

Teams of chartered accountants and New Westminster detectives have been investigating possible employee fraud for more than a month, including checking the records of some caseworkers back to 1973.

Vander Zalm said the investigation is expected to finish in about 10 days but he didn't know if charges would be laid.

The minister said he doesn't know how much money is involved in the New Westminster case.

Panarctic 'Doctored' Report

CALGARY (CP) — Panarctic Oils Ltd. last year doctored a report from one of its own consultants to downplay the environmental impact of extended seismic testing on Bathurst Island in the High Arctic, according to The Albertan.

The newspaper, in a copyright story today, also said Panarctic pleaded guilty at Yellowknife May 20 to operating in the territories without a land use permit and was fined $2,000.

Since 1971, only five court convictions have been registered under land use regulations although more than 1,400 permits have been issued.

Only Panarctic has been convicted twice, once May 20 and once for violations at a High Arctic well, the newspaper said.

Panarctic is owned 45 per cent by the federal government with the remaining 55 per cent held by a consortium of 30 private companies.

The newspaper said that in the winter of 1975, Panarctic was conducting a seismic program across the southern end of Bathurst Island.

Seismic crews shared the area with about 90 muskoxen and 25 caribou, the remnants of much larger herds decimated the previous winter by harsh weather that limited grazing.

As a result, a land use permit specified Panarctic had to conclude its seismic program by March 15, 1975, to allow the muskoxen to go through their calving period undisturbed.

Quoting sources close to F. F. Slaney Ltd., then Panarctic's environmental consulting firm, the paper said Panarctic altered and made additions to an 'opinion submitted by Slaney after the Northwest Territories land use office in Yellowknife rebuffed repeated requests for an extension in the testing program of at least 16 days and to add an

Whittaker said B.C. Rail's announcement that the unions' recently-won pay increases would probably be subject to anti-inflation board approval could mean the end of any good faith between the unions and the railway.

Bilingual Markers Not Wanted

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — City council decided Monday to tell the federal government that it doesn't want bilingual markers on several federal historic sites here.

The federal government notified the city earlier that it will replace three English plaques with bilingual ones as part of a nation-wide program started one year ago.

"It's a real waste of money," said Ald. Bill Cousins. "It really perturbs me. They must have rocks in their heads."

Reading a statement in French, Ald. Cousins said he wasn't opposed to bilingualism, but objected to what he termed the unnecessary expense of changing the plaques.

Anyone seen grey squirrels in and around Victoria?

If so, curator of mammals Charlie Guiguet of the Provincial Museum, would appreciate receiving reports of sightings. He's keeping a record of the squirrel population and watching to see if they are expanding their territory.

The reason for all this is because the grey squirrel is not a native of Vancouver Island, and for that matter, nor British Columbia. But it seems in the fall of 1966, the Vandermeer Game Farm in Metchosin acquired two females and a male grey squirrel from Ontario. The animals escaped accidentally shortly after they were brought here.

Since then they have multiplied. Douglas Wood of Victoria, in 1974 reported sighting several families of grey squirrels at widely separated locations in the Metchosin area. Some 12 free-living individuals are also said to appear regularly for handouts at Weir's Beach.

The book, The House on Indigo Street, is now in the hands of Clark Irwin's editorial board.

Mrs. Rippon said the psychological mysteries published by Doubleday were set in France, while Indigo Street was set in Vancouver's Gastown.

But Doubleday hasn't totally rejected the Victoria writer. They've recently published another of her mysteries, The Ninth Tentacle — her third in the past 10 years.

Unless governments loosen their tight economic reins the standard of education at the University of Victoria will deteriorate next year, UVic president Howard Petch said Monday.

"This year it's very tight and looks bad," Petch said. "But next year the academic development at this university is going to be hurt. There's no getting around it."

Citing Education Minister Pat McGeer's announcement that a special universities' grant given this year will not be alloted next year, Petch said all indications were that the situation was not going to change.

UVic is starting two new programs this year — schools of social work and nursing — and are entering the second year of its new and expensive law school and the third year of the school of public administration.

Any new university program takes at least four years to get into full swing — one year to set up and three years of additional staff and resources as students progress towards finishing their degree.

"Today a minimal law library costs $1.5 million," Petch said, pointing out just one cost factor. UVic received no special capital grant for the library, so the law library will have to come out of the operating budget.

And each year new programs need twice as many professors since the courses double their enrolment as first-year students move to second year and a flock of first year students enter the program.

This year most faculties are limiting enrolment, but those restrictions aren't half as bad as they are for new programs.

The UVic calendar says the new school of social work will allow a maximum of 35 students. Now Petch isn't sure if the program has the resources to handle this many.

Petch told the director of the nursing school to start the year with the absolute minimum and only a very few students will be allowed in the program.

The law school, instead of growing larger, has been cut by almost half the number of students expected to enter the first year.

Of the 870 applicants for the law school last year, 72 were accepted for the program. Of the same number expected to apply this year, 44 will be allowed in.

"If we were the size of UBC we could accommodate one such new program," Petch said. "But we are the smallest university with the smallest budget and we just can't do four new programs."

Petch also said it was improtant to realize that the new programs weren't all the university's doing. "The previous education minister (Eileen Dailly in the NDP government) asked us to start these programs and gave us a small amount of money. Now we're committed but we don't have the funds," he said.

Petch said the disbursment of funds through the 11-man government appointed universities council is partly to blame.

PETCH
. . . Academic warning

That body gets all the government funds and distributes them to the province's three public universities — UVic, UBC and SFU.

Petch is not happy with the allotment given to UVic. "The council of universities is not committed to our new programs and they give us, we feel, a pretty poor deal in funds."

UBC received $99.3 million, SFU $35.9 million and UVic $27.6 million. "I just can't understand that sort of differential." Petch said. Neither of the other two universities has anywhere near the number of new programs UVic does.

Operating costs for the new programs don't grow at nine per cent per annum as is usual, he said, but take big jump seach year.

In the allotment from the universities council there is no breakdown of what the funds are for and why they were distributed in the way they were, although Petch has repeatedly asked for a breakdown. Petch wonders if the council members themselves even bother with a breakdown.

And he wonders why there is no extra money for the university starting all the new and expensive programs.

He said the law applicants turned away from UVic have nowhere else to go.

And it's almost impossible for a B.C. student to get training in optometry, he said.

The only English speaking Canadian school of optometry is at Waterloo University in Ontario. The other western provinces have a contract with that university to pay for their students who go there for optometry training.

But B.C. has no such contract so there is very little chance for a B.C. student to get accepted to the program.

Petch has wanted a school of opometry at UVic from the day he first took the job here in 1974.

But it will just have to wait a little longer. There's no money available to set up the

Saanich Residents Sink Developer's Parking Lot

Residents of Stoba Lane in Saanich turned out en mass Monday to scuttle a Vancouver developer's plans to build a parking lot on their cul-de-sac street.

They also stopped his plans to put more commercial area in a three-storey building now under construction on the adjacent property which fronts on Quadra.

Architect Bing Marr of Bing Marr and Associates applied for rezoning to allow a 16-space parking lot to be built adjacent to the new building.

Original plans called for office space on the first floor and apartments on the two storeys above.

Marr told the public hearing a change of plans would have the space for five cars under the building used for office space and the main floor assigned for retail outlets instead. He promised to install a fence and landscaping as required by council.

"It's not a parking lot that's being approved, it's expansion of commercial," observed resident Ken Bantesko. He said those living in the apartments would be surrounded by blacktop if the parking lot was approved. He said the lot would be better used to provide the apartment dwellers with some greenbelt.

The council unanimously rejected Marr's application.

An application for rezoning to build a parking lot at 3367 Oak Street to provide parking space for an adjacent office building received council's blessing.

Spokesman Robert Heath told council when the building was built two years ago an additional $30,000 was spent to allow for future expansion of an additional floor.

Heath promised the two parcels would be consolidated and agreed he and his partners would provide curbs, gutters and land allowance as set down by council.

Approval was also given to build a duplex immediately behind 2230 Edgelow, on condition the developer provided 10-foot side allowances in that order cars could be parked in the rear of the building.

The building will be strata title.

An application to build a duplex on the northwest corner of Quadra and Nicholson was tabled, however, until council's new guidelines for duplex development are completed and ratified. The lot is 7,000 square feet and the municipality's planning department is recommending that lots be a minimum of 8,000 square feet.

Acting mayor Sandy Noel cast the deciding vote.

Go Public, Ease Taxes Council Tells Academy

Supporters of the Victoria Riding Academy were advised Monday one way in which the financially-pressed recreation facility could get some tax easement would be to have it run by an association.

Oak Bay council, sitting as a committee-as-a-whole with Ald. John Goult as chairman, told the supporters a written brief submitted by them will be dealt with at the next regular council meeting.

The aldermen suggested the supporters should be able to tell council whether or not they will form an association and how much responsibility they are prepared to assume at that meeting.

The academy owes $8,218 for 1976 taxes. This, plus the $200 rent paid monthly brings the total bill payable to Oak Bay to $10,618 for the year.

Ald. Doug Watts raised the ire of academy supporters when he said academy operators Don and Aileen Carley, after Oak Bay bought the property for $112,500 were allowed to stay on "as a retirement hobby for 10 years or so . . . obviously they can't go on for ever."

"To say it is a retirement hobby for the Carleys is way out of order," retorted David Campbell. "There are 200 or 300 children there on Saturdays. It's the only place you can get — or rent — riding horses in this area. What's so wrong in subsidizing another recreation facility?"

He added, "We want to keep it as a recreation facility for Oak Bay . . . whether you run it, the Carleys, or Shirley Dowell runs it."

Mayor Brian Smith pointed out the Municipal Act prevents the academy getting any tax relief because, whether or not it is making or losing money, it is being operated as a business by the Carleys. He suggested that if an association ran the academy, it might change the picture.

In their brief the academy supporters list 10 improvements carried out on the Cedar Hill Cross Road property and another four that are either being planned or carried out.

Council Rejects Strata Duplexes

Lack of rental units and how to accept a day care centre without condoning it were among the problems discussed at Esquimalt town council committee meetings Monday.

Aldermen will recommend to the regular board meeting next week that two applications to convert two duplexes to single-family dwellings under the Strata Tites Act be turned down.

Esquimalt has lifted an earlier moratorium on conversions, but during discussion, aldermen said there was still such a low number of available rental units in the area that both applications should be rejected.

They also rejected an application to turn a 29,000-square-foot parcel of land at 946 Selkirk into six small single-family dwelling lots.

Aldermen said townhouses should be built on that property, and will ask the developer — Vancouver Island Development Corporation — to design something more in line with the original plan for the land.

Councillors had difficulty handling a request by the Esquimalt pre-school co-operative for permission to use some municipal land next to the school's new headquarters as a free play area.

The pre-school will be operating out of the Bethel Tabernacle, 1100 Colville Rd. The adjacent municipal land is designated access to the Gorge Vale Golf course.

While agreeing to the need for pre-schools, aldermen said they weren't in a position to give anyone official permission to use land dedicated as roadway.

VGH Cuts Costs By Cutting Menus

Victoria General Hospital may be able to save as much as $250,000 a year by taking the choice of meals away from patients next week.

Royal Jubilee Hospital is also examining changes in meal options now given patients as both hospitals struggle with cost-cutting measures in the face of acute budget squeezes.

Starting next Tuesday patients at Victoria General will no longer select their choice from two main courses and three or four desserts. They will be asked to indicate when they enter hospital which beverage they prefer.

The choice on meals left to them will be whether they want large, average or small portions.

It's difficult to accurately measure how much money will be saved because selective menus involve part of the work of a number of different personnel, Garth Gloeckler, director of planning and hospital services, said today.

The changes will trim some labor for nursing staff, ward clerks, dietary clerks and cooks, for example.

Waterskier Recovering

Thomas Murphy, 23, of Victoria was reported in good condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital this morning recovering from injuries he received in a freak waterskiing accident on Shawnigan Lake Sunday.

Witnesses said Murphy was in the water waiting to be picked up when the bow of the pick-up boat got caught in the wind, struck him and dragged him into the propellor where he cut his arm and leg.

According to witnesses, boat passenger Mike Jones, also of Victoria, jumped into the water and helped Murphy to safety.

BREAD UP 3c

The price of bread is up three cents a loaf in Victoria today, McDonald's Bread manager John McDonald said today.

He said the company is passing along increased costs, including fuel, light and power and an increase of $10,000 in property taxes.

The increase followed a hike in January when McDonald's and McGavin Toastmaster, the parent company, told the Anti-Inflation Board a further increase would be necessary in about 90 days.

McDonald said the new wholesale prices are 53 cents for 50.75 for a 24-ounce loaf and 37 cents from 35.5 for a 16-ounce loaf. Suggested retail prices are 64 cents, up from 61 cents for a 24-ounce loaf. The 16-ounce loaf probably will go to 45 from 43 cents, he said.

McDonald said costs have risen high enough to justify even further increases but there was no immediate plan to seek a hike above the new level.

The increase discussed with the AIB at the beginning of the year took effect at the beginning of June.

Nothing's as Certain as . . .

With only one day left before the deadline for payment of property taxes expires, municipal tax offices in the Greater Victoria area were coping with long line-ups of late payers today and expecting more of the same Wednesday.

Over the last week to 10 days the tempo of payment has varied considerably from municipality to municipality.

While Saanich has been kept moderately busy, according to officials, in Victoria prior to Monday the cash inflow was "very slow."

"It was the worst I had ever seen it," commented tax collector Frank Robinson.

"We didn't know if it meant they were all leaving it until the last minute or that they just weren't going to pay."

But on Monday there was a sharp increase in activity and Robinson said there was nothing to indicate the taxpayers were witholding payment, despite predictions of such action to protest tax increases as high as 20 per cent this year.

Saanich comptroller-treasurer Roy Broughton expressed a similar view. "I think people are resigned to the fact that they pay, regardless," he said.

He noted that 75 to 80 per cent of the municipality's total property taxes come from mortgage companies, which are habitually late payers.

Any tax bills unpaid after municipal offices close Wednesday will automatically attract a five per cent penalty.

Liquor Sale Overhaul

Attorney-General Garde Gardom said today he hopes to have reviewed the entire liquor distribution system in B.C. within two months.

Gardom said he had hoped the review could have been completed by June. He said it would entail cabinet consideration of whether beer should be available in corner stores, advertising, enforcement, and whether it will be possible to sell spirits in beer parlors.

He said cabinet had been too busy to meet his target date for completion.

He was commenting on a statement by Vic Woodland general manager of the Liquor Administration Branch.

Woodland said he was apprehensive about following the example set by Quebec which is the only province in Canada that has corner-store distribution.

He said it would create enforcement problems and might lead to an increase in the number of underage drinkers.

There are 22 grocery stores in remote areas that have been designated agency stores, he said, but the LAB is slowing down the process of designating those outlets and no other hs have been issued licences in the last six or seven months.

Curent crieria for licensing the stores is that the government liquor store must be at least 30 miles away.

The committee was told the markup on locally produced wines is 66 per cent on cost and for foreign wines is 117 per cent.

Wine sales in the province netted $1.25 million in the market for locally produced wines and $600,000 for foreign imports, he said.

Asked if the LAB was considering providing draft beer for private use, Woodland said it wasn't likely.

He said it is an awkward product to sell because it has to be refrigerated constantly and "it's more sensitive than milk to a change in temperature."

Socred MLA Stephen Rogers (Vancouver-South) asked if there had been any decrease in the "soda pop" sparkling wines sold in the province. Woodland replied that sales are slipping a bit but because they have a moderately low alcohol content of seven per cent and are popular with young people, they will still be available.
